day evening. As that gentleman was walking down the canal, a short distance from the basin, two pistols were suddenly discharged at his breast, but, happi ly, without effect, by a person concealed behind some bricks. In the confusion of the moment, Captain Lainés, while drawing the sword from his cane, fell into one of those holes that have been made by the travelling of the horses on the margin of the canal. While in this situation, the assassin who had attempted to shoot him, began to beat Capt. L. upon the head, with the but of a pistol, and with a brick; but being seized by the leg, the ruffian was thrown into the canal, where he was picked up by a boat, and rowed to the lower selves. side of the basis. Two or three evenings ago the Clayists attempted to get up a meeting in the parish of Jefferson, at the sign of the "Bull's Head," and a most sad bull they made of it. The Saturday evening previous, a meeting of Jacksonists was held in the same parish,—the proceedings of which have been published in all the republican journals of the city-and although the weater was extremely wet and oisterous, a large room in the Lafayette hotel was crowded to overdowing with friends of the good cause. In 1823, there were less than twenty votes for the Jackson electoral ticket, in the parish of Jefferson : we are much mistaken, if, this year, the republican ticket does not have a hand. some majority. The veto-message is doing wonders!

The democratic-republicans of the seventh ward, we perceive by a call for a meeting, which will be found in our columns, are about taking measures to sequre the success of the republican electoral ticket. PAMPHLET ON BANKING AND CURENCY,—I have diligently read this ingenious essay, and I advise you not to lean upon the broken reed. If all the author says were go:pel, the farmers and planters will never believe that gold and silver are not and cannot be a standard of value: for they will always think that the substance which contains most value in itself is the best representative of other values. Ruling axioms are to a weary mind what a confortable bed is to a fatigued body: because human nature wishes to rest upon some foundation. Inquiry cannot always be upon full tension: It will rather assume something as true, and rest and reason there.

In all the author says and find this image may be found in the hearts of its countrymen. Who is there, of the descendants of any distinguished man, the celebrated Fulton, for example, who would not wish to possess his portrait, so long as he could be indulged in witnessing the operations of a steam engine? This affectation of so nething more than Roman virtue appears to have become aftering more than Roman virtue appears to have become aftering more than Roman virtue appears to have become aftering more than Roman virtue appears to have become study in the form of that great and good man could be placed as reprovidentially in the capitol. Are we to imagine there is no centre of gravity netween bodies because they move? Gravitation is itself a dictator and regulator of motion.—But I shall not lecture on these deep subjects without double pay. No; no; 1'll sot wrinkle my brows with thinking, farther than my bond obliges me. Now I shall give you my views, as in duty bound, how such things may be turned to account.

Perhaps I owe it in truth to the author of the pamphlet, to give him praise for his project of improving the state banks under an amendment of the United States constitution. It is an improvement on Mr. Jefferson's scheme. A most diabolical attempt was made to assassinate Capt.
