is thus smalled to publish some interesting details of what it terms "the bloodiest, and perhaps the most decisive and brilliant battle of the war." No despatches were received from General Scorn nor were any letters from the Camp received by the Secretary. But instead of these, there were letters addressed to the War. Department from an officer ist Vers Cruz, enclosing others written by two officers of the arms, who shore the brunt and battle of the day, and the other from a Captain in the service.—These letters give to the whole account the statop and authenticity of official intelligence.

We have examined the various documents reletred to by the Usino without finding much that has not already been published here. The disparity of the number of troops engaged is strongly corroborated by one of these letters, which states that at the encounter at Churubusco, the American torces consisted of about 7,000 ment, and two high batteries, while those of the enemy numbered 32,000, with much heavy artifiery. Most of the fighting was done by the bayonet, which, in the landa of American soldiers, is a tudy itertite weapon.

The despatches received to the War post of the service,—There is the result will be, but they have not seed that no the service,—There is the common of the limit of the country of the shift of the day, and the country of the shift of the day, and there was no alternated to be a similar amount,—that they have a deposit, belonging a to brinks and individuals, subject to instant sall to be allowed that in the shapes of hidle payable falling due, to the sarrongly corroborated by one of these letters, while those of the enemy numbered 32,000, with much heavy artifiery. Most of the fighting was done by the bayonet, which, in the landa of American soldiers, is a tudy iterative weapon.

The despatches received by the Secretary of State were from Mr Trist. The Union does not provide the purpose of negotiating, had already had two meetings, and were to have a third and prichaps a last interview on Monday, the

A first that had stood, father and sone, for helf a century—and had never fatered during all the Embirgoes, Non-Intercourse. Wars, Yellow-Fever and Cholera times, and had stood when the United States Bank even had been compelled to yield. The men who founded the bosses are deceased, but their sons, who were long in the firm, survive. Their credit was undoubted in Europe, Asia and America; their bills passed current and their credits was recognized in every commercial city in the world, and this faith and confidence was unshaken up to the day of their stoppase,—There are houses and firms, in this city, that have stood in high credit as long as the four referred to, but they have not been!
