"THE UNION must be preserved," WEDNESDAY MORNING. JUNE 3, 1836.

The eastern mail of vesterday brought journals from New York of the 19th ult; Washington of the 21st; and Charleston of the 26th. There were no later arrivals from Europe: nor any domestic news of importance to New Orleans, except the extensive and increasing measures for taking away from her the western trade.

Reporters are present for the Baltimore and Washington journals; for some from New York and Boston.

The district attorney of the 3d judicial district has written Louisiana (St Francisville) Journal-in consequence of some anded our remarks: and they were merely intended to direct the attention of the governor to the subject.

Had the language used by Mr Haralson been more courteous, we might have answered any query from him. At present we shall merely answer by proposing interrogatories; which if satisfactority answered may efface the imputation on the conduct of the district attorney. But be it distinctly understood that we neither make nor invinuate any specific charge against that gentlemen; and that these queries are proposed as an act of justice to him as to ourselves.

1. What account can be given of those who are said to have trespassed on the premises of Mrs Biggs at Jackson? An ample answer is earnestly solicited to this enquiry.

2. How many true bills were returned by the grand jury during the last three terms? How many persons were soquitted against whom those bills had been found; and on what ground? Please let the number in both instances b minutely given; with the charges against them in the indist-

A satisfactory answer to these queries-but let them not be considered charges, may be advantageous to Mr Haraiso; and if we are in error by misinformation, we shall cheerfully acknowledge that error, or know what course to pursue.

In the case of the heirs of Poultney vs Cecil and others the decision of the supreme court was delivered in a luminous and satisfactory manner by the Hon, HENRY A BULLARD | ment for Boston cashiers to sen I their specia into the country associate judge. The case involved in itself a large amount of property and consequently of interests and feelings and concerned most of the cit zons of Lafavette and many of the faubourg St Mary, as analogous cases depended on its contested; but that title became vacant on his decease; and although the succession was opened in 1819, this suit was not instituted till December '32, when the heirs claimed and accepted the succession, with the benefit of inventory. That they had the faculty to acquire the property by acceptance on the death of their father, cannot be denied; and that therefore the estate was vacant so long as the acceptance was suspended, is conformable to the practice of the courts and discipline of the code of this state. The succession being vacant, the property was sold to satisfy the demands of ere. ditors. Both parties appeared now before the courts under circumstances of equity: the plaintiffs alleging their primary claims as heirs of the property; appealing to their tender age and legal incapacity to accept the succession when openeds and invoking the protection of the laws as the guardism of their rights :- while the defendants appear as purchasers in good faith of the property when publicly sold; as utter strangers to the proceedings of which their adversaries complain: and as having given a valuable consideration for property now long in their possession-appealing in their turn to the presumed sanctity of judicial proceedings growing out of the alleged insolvency of the plaintiffs' ancestor; the renunciation meet his engagements; and had obtained a resnite for one wo and three years, which was homologated by the court. He died before the first payment became due, secording to the terms of the respite .-- which had been asked for and granted on the express ground of his inability to nay his debts. After this respite was granted and sanctioned by the court, the debtor might have been compelled to pay at the tms fixed erby said respite; was no longer at liberty to make a voluntary surrender; and was without any other remedy He might be compelled to give security, if it was proved that he concealed or dissipated his property in fraud of his

The immetion then was whether the legal representatives of the deceased debtor could avail themselves of the prege vilgranted by she greditors, and sanctioned by judicial authority; or whether it was merely personal and ceased on the death of the debtor. Now as the conditions upon which the respite was granted—that the debts should be paid at stipulated periods, under pain of compulsory process—was not hinding on the beneficiary heirs, they could not claim the privileges of the respite. The estate was therefore insolven: by the death of Poultney; all his debts being due and demandable, notwithstanding the respite, and that the success sion was not represented by an heir. What then was the remedy of the creditors during this vacant succession? Shortly after Poultney's death, his widow caused the real to he affixed to the effects of the estate; and proceeded under anthority of the court of probates to have an inventory taken; and finally (25th January 1830) by a formal declaration before a notary public, renounced the community of acquests and gains. On the 10th of the ensuing February, some of the creditors who were parties to the respite applied by petition to the same court of the 1st judicial district, resenting the insolvency of the succession; the renunciation by the widow; and that the estate was not represented :requesting sametime to have a meeting of the creditors to consider the affairs of the succession; and to name syndics to administer the same for the benefit of all concerned. Syndies were accordingly appointed and confirmed by the district, court; and were authorized to table possession of the estate, and sell the property. Be virtue of this proceedings the court of probates order. I the seals to be taken from the effects of the deces ed; and the property to be delivered up to the administration of the syndics, who became virtually and bess y the curators of the vacant succession—their claims being allowable agreeab'v to the 95th article of the civil code Was then this proceeding contradictorily with that which terminated in the slienation of the property in question hinding on the heirs, conformably to a just construction of that 95th artime of the code, which recognizes the validity of act done with the administrators or curators of the vacant

The right is conceded to creditors to take possessio vacant cetate insolvent; and have it administered by cura- religious instruction of the colored population and annual tore, syndics or persons under any name selected-in the same manner and to the same extent on the death of an in solvent debtor, as on his flight or failure; for the purpose of procuring the payment of their claims in the nature of a con

The attorneys for the plaintiff contended however that the proceedings were null; because lst, no citation nor notice proceedings were suil; because 1st, no citation nor notice had previously been given to the heirs; and 2d the court of probates—not the district court—alone had the cognizance of fer reward, of not less than five hundred nor more than the case. But the rights of minors like the heirs of Poultney are validly exercised by their tutors ; and what was done by their tutrix or mother was obligatory on them : for such children are not personally entitled to notice. As then their tutrix acquireced, with a full kn > wledge of the proceedings: and neglected to interfere, -if the call made on her was no more formal, the legitimate redress would have been to authorize a restitution ad integrum on the part of the minors so far as they said show themselves injured by the proceed ings. Again the vacant succession of Poultney's estate does not come within those, over which the court of profintes has exclusive jurisdiction : for the creditions in this case had the right of mortgage; and the privilege of vendors; and could ver hands it might fall—the jurisdiction in such cases be langing to the district court, not to the court of probatesand has long been exercised by the formers to disturb the validity of which, after a series of years and considerable alienation of property, would entail incalculable much iefe

Syndics having been thus properly appointed and arithor. ized, the creditors of the estate had the right to institute hypothecary actions against them as defensors. By the proeedings of Harrod and Ogden against the syndies, the land n controversy was sold to satisfy a mortgage with the privilege of vendor, which was due to them under a subrogation from Madame Rousseau: This alienation is considered valid: TER NATIONAL CONVENTION assembled at Battimore on and calculated to divest the heirs of their titles to the success sion : also to secure the possession of all who claim under Soon after the assembly was convened, on motion of Mr the title acquired by this ationation—for the documentary Kremer of Pa, the Hon Anonew Stevenson of Va, was approvidence furnished by the defendants of the sheriff's deed and po ated president by a unanimous vote :- on which he return- return upon the execution and judgment rendered is prima ed thanks for the honor conferred on him; warmly enlogized facie proof of g valid alteration—he therefore who attacks the president for his noble and successful efforts in the cause such a kenation must show that the forms of law had no

The court is therefore of opinion that the rules which an ply to the sale of minors' property as such when the title is Bank Stocks.—23 shares U. S. Shortly after, the convention adjourned to meet tingent and residuary, subject to the undoubted claims of cerditore; and who in this very case appear only as benefi. ciery heirs claiming property already alienated for the payment of debts-which (if their tutrix had accepted the estate in 1823) would have been due by them: and the property now sued for, would have been a pledge in their hands for a very singular tirade again 62 us, in a letter addressed thro' the payment. When minors are prejudiced by the negligence or omissions of their tutors, they are entitled to restitution; but remarks in a former number of our paper. We have no it does not follow that the acquired rights of third persons resonal knowledge of Mr Haralson, nor any part of his resung on the faith of judicial proceedings, are to be sacrifipublic or private conduct; no improper motive has therefore | ced-not for the purpose of replacing the plaintiffs in the position they would otherwise have occupied; but to give them the possession of the property, when it is manifestly impossible at the same time to restore the creditors-whose rights are no less sacred-to their original condition in relation to the estate. More than restitution is therefore man fearly sought—but more than mere restitution cannot justly nor legally be demanded.

On the whole, the court was of opinion that the alienation of the property was necessary and legal; was made in good faith; and with the proper formalities of law. The jidgment of the district court was therefore confirmed with
