THE SREPHERD WILL CASE. This suit, which has been on trial before

The lesson to be drawn from this contestation by those who have property to leave behind them at death is, that it is dangerons to attempt to exade and circumvent the law regulating the transmission of estates. This was exactly what the evidence brought forward on this trial, if we understand it, proves James II. Shepherd to have done. He executed two papers—one outradictory of the other—ou the same day, and sea'ed them up together in the same on the ground that this property has been pleigled for the redemption of city when the content of the following that the property has been pleigled for the redemption of city when the content of the property has been pleigled for the redemption of city when the content of the property has been pleigled for the redemption of city when the content of the property has been pleigled for the redemption of city when the property has a seal of the property has been pleigled for the redemption of city when the property has a property of the content of the property has been pleigled for the redemption of city when the property has a property than the property has been pleigled for the redemption of city when the property has a property of the content of the property has a property of the property of the property has a property of the property of the property of the property has a property of the propert

One of these papers disposed of his entire property to a universal legatee—his brother, R. D. Shepherd, or, in case of his death, to another brother, Alram Shepherd, ignoring all his other relatives. This will was in the proper form, and doubtlesse was intended by him to be placed on the records of the Probate Court, and to be executed under its seatcion, which execution was ordered by the Court and carried into effect. The other document as the evidence goes to prove, to the other document as the evidence goes to prove, to the other series and his nephews and who were to be placed in possession of it by his universal legatee, R. He seems to have had full confidence in the integrity of his brother—a confidence which the evidence leads us to be lieve was not justified. Had he placed with the alternate universal legates, Abram Shepheld, a copy of these two papers, and explained to him his purposes, this suit might have been avoided and R. D.
