a. (S//NF) Prior History: Detainee's parents died when he was young and his sister raised him in Tabuk. However, detainee claims Yemeni citizenship. Detainee attended two years of high school where he studied Arabic, Islamic law, math, and the Hadith (sayings of the Prophet Muhammad). Detainee failed out of high school and went to work as a telephone repairman.<sup>1</sup>

b. (S//NF) Recruitment and Travel: Detainee answered a fatwa (religious decree) issued by Shaykh Hammud Bin Uqla al-Shuaibi, aka (Shaykh Hamud al-Uqla), which he saw on an information board at a mosque.<sup>2</sup> Subsequently, Fawaz al-Jihani contacted detainee

<sup>2</sup> Analyst Note: Shaykh Hamud Bin Uqla was one of the first radical religious leaders to issue fatwa calling on Muslims to support the mujahideen who were assisting the Afghans fight the Soviets. In 1995, he was among several clerics arrested for criticizing the Saudi royal family's pro-Western policies. After the 11 September 2001 attacks on the US, he issued fatwa declaring that those supporting the US and Coalition forces against Muslims (a concerning the fatwa. Detainee met Fawaz at a mosque in the neighborhood of al-Salmanyah. Fawaz gave detainee 1,500 Saudi riyals for his journey to participate in jihad. Detainee did not actually travel to Afghanistan until five to seven months after talking with Fawaz. In May 2001, detainee departed for Afghanistan via Karachi and Quetta, Pakistan (PK). Fawaz informed detainee to go to Karachi, PK, and stay at the Faran Hotel. Detainee was told Abdallah al-Rhimi would meet him at the hotel. Detainee traveled with his sister's brother-in-law, Nasir Muhammad al-Jizani. Al-Rhimi took detainee's passport and purchased an airline ticket to Quetta for detainee. Detainee met an Afghan named Muhammad at the Quetta airport, who took detainee to stay at Muhammad's house for approximately two days. Muhammad took detainee's passport and money and left detainee with another Afghan who guided them across the Afghan boarder. Detainee then traveled by automobile to Kandahar, AF, where he was greeted by Taliban members.<sup>3</sup>

c. (S//NF) Training and Activities: Muhammad then took detainee to the Khalid Ibn al-Walid Camp, a preparation camp for the al-Faruq Training Camp. Detainee stayed at the Khalid Ibn al-Walid Camp for approximately three days. Detainee was introduced to the emir (leader) of the al-Faruq Camp, Abd al-Qadus, and stayed there for approximately three weeks. During that time, he received training on the AK-47 assault rifle from a trainer named Hakim al-Taizi.<sup>4</sup> After completing his training, detainee was taken to Kunduz, AF, and then to the combat line at Khwaja Ghar, AF. Upon arrival, Muhammad took detainee to the emir where he was given the task of preparing food. Detainee stayed at Khwaja Ghar for approximately five months. Detainee also received advanced weapons training on the front lines at Khwaja Ghar.<sup>5</sup>

5. (U) Capture Information:

a. (S//NF) Over 70 JTF-GTMO detainees surrendered to General Abd al-Rasheed Dostum's troops in late November 2001. Dostum's forces took the prisoners to the Qala-I-Jangi prison located outside Mazar-E-Sharif, AF, on 24 November 2001. After one night in captivity, the prisoners revolted leading to the deaths of members of the Northern Alliance forces and CIA operative Johnny "Mike" Spann.<sup>6</sup> Detainee was wounded during the

His fatwa have "justified" the 11 September attacks and instructed Muslims to defend the Taliban, declaring that those supporting US and Coalition forces against Muslims were themselves nonbelievers. However, he has not been forthcoming on information pertaining to his own or his brothers' affiliations with extremist activities against US or allied interests. There are numerous inconsistencies and gaps in his account, such as an approximate 6 to 8 week gap from his date of travel to Afghanistan to his presence in Kunduz. Detainee also claimed to have traveled to Afghanistan in both July 2000 and May 2001, when he stayed at a Taliban guesthouse before traveling to the front lines.<sup>8</sup> Detainee denies receiving weapons training, yet several sources identify detainee as receiving a variety of weapons training at al-Faruq, Kandahar Compound Six, and Saber Mountain, AF.
