The Fever.

From the early period of the season at which the epidemic appeared, and from the intensity of character it has assumed, we are fearful that for many weeks to come, we may be unable to announce its disappearance. It is sure, indeed, that well marked cases of yellow fever presenting themselves before the beginning of August, and yet rarer for the disease to prevail as an epidemic before the end of that month, or the commencement of September. This year, for the first time, perfectly defined cases of fever came under medical observation toward the close of July, and the malady raged as an undoubted epidemic before the middle of August. For the last week, the average number of deaths from the pestilence per diem has exceeded forty—a rate of mortality that, we imagine has very seldom, if ever, occurred before the end of August, even in the worst aspects of the disease. Independently of other considerations, the naked fact that above 40 victims are daily reported by the Board of Health, is an evidence that we have a trying, gloomy and prolonged period of sickness to encounter.

There is little doubt that the fever has this year come to us, as it were, quickened into premature existence by adventitious causes. Just at the epoch when the heats of midsummer were approaching, and when the city is usually purged of the presence of those who, from want of acclimation, would serve as fuel to the disease, very large numbers of volunteers arrived in New Orleans and sojourned here several weeks. At the same time, the distress in Europe inducing immense numbers to seek the more genial soil of our country, brought hither a large proportion of Irish and German strangers. Most of the volunteers left before the first cases of fever were noticed, but the majority of the foreign immigrants have remained and have proved severe sufferers from the virulence of the epidemic. Add to these causes the constant communication between Vera Cruz and New Orleans, and there will be no difficulty in accounting for the appearance of the fever so soon in the season, and for the terrible ravages it has inflicted upon the laboring classes of the population.

Having broken out in August, it will not probably be arrested before October. We hope differently, but the usual progress of the disease, and the circumstance of so many unacclimated persons residing among us, lead to no other conclusion. The weather continues intensely hot, and while the thermometer steadily ranges above eighty degrees, all experience shows that the only abatement that can be looked for, is when the material for the malady is exhausted by departure or death. Meanwhile, it is at least consolatory to remark, that most physicians concur in the opinion that the fever is of a manageable form; that immediate and skilful medical treatment generally effects a rapid cure, and that the mortality is chiefly confined to persons in humble life, who either neglect to avail themselves of the attention which an active benevolence proffers to them, or whose vital energies are hopelessly impaired by exposure, the habit of indulging in ardent spirits and improper or insufficient food.

TENNESSEE.—We received yesterday a slip, without date or title, but which from the type appears to be from the office of the Nashville Union, it says:

Wednesday night's eastern mail settled the business, and settled it in favor of the whigs, by a small majority. The first Congressional district seems to have voted badly. Johnson is elected to Congress by a base majority; and the whigs elected their members to the Legislature in the thorough democratic counties of Hawkins and Greene! We counted more confidently on a gain in this district than in any other in the State; and the whigs were generally willing to concede it. Something must have been got up by the whigs on the eve of the election to have produced the result which we are forced now to chronicle. What that something was we shall doubtless hear soon enough.

The heavy majority for the whig candidate in Dyer we fear defeats Stanton for Congress in the Memphis district.

The Legislature will be heavily whig. The Senate will stand twelve democrats to thirteen whigs. The whigs have already made a net gain of five representatives, which will give them seven majority in the House. We are rejoiced to hear that they have also gained the members in the Tipton and Lauderdale, and Dyer and Obion districts, which will increase their majority to eleven.

Returns, official and reported, are given from every County in the State except six. Ned S. Brown has gained in these, some 2,500 votes, and has a majority of 500. The Counties not heard from, are Johnson, Morgan, Lauderdale, Obion, Perry and Tipton. They gave a whig majority of 733 two years ago. We presume that Whig Brown is elected by not less than 600, and not more than 1,000 majority. It is proper to add that the Nashville Union is the Locofoco organ, and had doubtless made the best possible show for its own party.

ANOTHER RELIC OF THE REVOLUTION GONE.—The Savannah Republican, announces the death of SHERALL SHERRALL, Esq., a veteran soldier of the Revolutionary, who has gone down to the grave full of years and honors at the ripe old age of eighty-five. Here, says the Republican, he was born—here in the time of the Revolution he took a part in the memorable siege of Savannah, was taken prisoner by the British and confined for six months on a prison ship at this port and Charleston; and only liberated after having been sent to the West Indies and Philadelphia, and enduring much hardship and suffering. He held the appointment of Assistant Commissary in the American Army.

The Republican adds: After the Revolution, Mr. SHERALL was admitted to the bar in Camden county, and filled for a number of years the office of Justice of the Peace, the duties of which he performed to the satisfaction of the public and his own credit. He always adhered to the costume of the Revolution, endeared to, him by honorable recollections, and few strangers visited Savannah without striving to catch a glimpse of this surviving worthy of the Revolution.

By birth and education Mr SHERALL was attached to the Jewish faith, and his life and acts were modeled upon its precepts. He was a sterling patriot, a good citizen, and an honest man—his family may well be proud to cherish his memory.

His remains were attended to the grave by the battalion of volunteer corps belonging to the city, under the command of Maj. Lewis, and a large concourse of citizens.

NEW CROPS.—The reports about the cotton crop having appeared in various places in the country, turn out to be unfounded. We do not find that they have done any injury any where yet. The crops are generally represented as good.

JAMES MONROE.—We are indebted to J. C. Morgan, of the Literary Depot, Exchange Place, for a copy of a work entitled "Ellen Monroe, a sequel to Life in London." The novel, of which this is the continuation, excited great interest from its vivid portraiture of character, felicity and intricacy of plot and variety of incident, and we have no doubt "Ellen Monroe" exhibits the same merits in an equal degree. The author is unknown, but is likely to become famous through his works.

VARIETY OF NEGRO WOMEN.—The negro women differ but little from the men in their general characteristics. They are, however, more active and industrious and better temper'd as a class. They are much employed as nurses, and in those situations they discharge their duties well. Their personal vanity is boundless and every penny they can save is spent in dress and ornaments. It is amusing to see them, on festival days, parading about the streets dressed in white muslin gowns trimmed with red, and short sleeves displaying their black arms. Very short petticoats, seldom extending below the ankle, serve to exhibit the tawdry finery of red silk stockings and light blue satin slippers. From their ears are suspended little gold drops, and their uncovered necks and breasts frequently display what they call a necklace of very small glass beads, but which would be thought by ladies of fashion pearls, worth several thousand dollars. The pure white of the pearls was brilliantly heightened by the contrast of the jet black of the wearer's neck; for this class of negroes are more ornamental to the fashionable circles of common Creoles, than any other class of the human family. Their features in Fay

Later from the Brazos.

By the arrival of the steamer Galveston, we have been put in possession of [illegible] rumores to the 18th inst., inclusive. The following is an account of the [illegible] and depredations committed by marauding Mexicans on Government trains and travellers, and of skirmishes and massacres. A [illegible] of 27 Texans, commanded by Capt. [illegible] and ordered out by Col. Abbott, commander of Ceralvo, to scout the country between that post and Monterey, fell in with a large body of Mexicans, and were all killed but three. It appears that the Texans visited several ranches in the neighborhood of the place where the recent attacks had been made upon the trains. They found goods and property captured from the trains, and the guilt of the Mexican residents being clearly proven, the property was taken, the dwellings of the guilty burned, and several known desperate characters killed. Capt. Baylor was returning with three prisoners, when he was surrounded by some 300 Mexicans and completely hemmed in. The Mexicans charged upon his little band, killing many of them at the first fire. Three of the party escaped through the chaparral, having been dreadfully lacerated by thorns. When Capt. Baylor was last seen, he was wounded and unhorsed, but still fighting, and only three of his men were in their saddles. They think it impossible that any more could have escaped, and as two days had elapsed, and none had returned, their forebodings are doubtless correct. Letters were found among the property in the ranchos, establishing already a connivance between the Alcalde of Cerralvo and Canales. The Alcalde has been, therefore, arrested. Letters from Cerralvo state, that the Mexicans are lying in wait to cut off every train between that place and Monterey. A gentleman writes that hardly a day passes without some person being murdered on the road, and that the Americans know that the enemy are in large force in their immediate vicinity, without the means of netting, except on the defensive. We have, adds the correspondent, no mounted force at the post, nor the means of mounting a single man of our own, should an extreme case of necessity require it. It is much to be desired that the Government will soon clearly see the great folly of placing troops along this line, with their hands tied, to be made a laughing stock of, with an enemy so contemptible as the Mexicans.

Under the head of "Cowardly and Brutal Outrage and Theft," the Flag states that on the night of the 12th inst., a party of twelve Americans, mounted, armed and equipped as our volunteer cavalry, rode into the rancho of Soliceno, about eight leagues from Matamoros—the inhabitants of which are peaceful and friendly—and there committed excesses and outrages of every imaginable kind, under pretence of searching for arms. The men were allowed and forced to flee from their houses, the women insulted and robbed, and every dwelling rifled of what money could be found. One Mexican, in reporting to the Alcalde, states his loss at $120. Several other ranchos were visited, but the inhabitants were forewarned of their approach, and fled to the woods, with all their valuables. A few days previous, a similar body of men, conducted by two Mexicans, visited the rancho of La Jarita, and perpetrated like and even worse crimes. Fears of still more serious consequences to themselves, says the Flag, should they report the offenders to the commandant here, induced the Mexicans to bear their wrongs in silence—hence the reason so many days have elapsed without any mention, being made of it.

The Flag concludes its statement as follows:

Col. Davenport has been informed of these outrages, and is using proper measures to ferret out the offenders. When ascertained, it will be hoped a punishment due to their crimes will be inflicted upon them. The cowardly scoundrels, who could so disgrace the name of American soldiers, as to insult, abuse, ill treat and rob unarmed men and helpless women, will prove notorious in battle, and bring disgrace upon the company to which they are attached. The sooner the "Rogues March" announces their dismissal from the service, the better it will be for their companions in arms and the country, whose cause they dishonor. Some of the jewelry stolen from the ranchos, we are informed, has been disposed of in this city. This may lead to a conviction of the offenders.

Brigadier Gen. Thomas Marshall and Maj. Churchill, of the Commissary Department, passed up the river, on the 17th, on their way to join Gen. Taylor.

On the 17th inst., three Mexicans, who were employed in cleaning out a well and had descended into it for the purpose of removing some heavy obstruction which had fallen to the bottom, were overcome by the foul gases. They had remained in the well but a short time before they were hoisted out, but in that short time life had become extinct in two of them, and all efforts at resuscitation were unavailing. The third was restored to life by the timely and skilful advice and aid of Dr. Schuerman.

The fears expressed in Saturday's paper for the safety of Messrs. Cozens & Quantrille, former merchants of this city, who were proceeding to Monterey with goods, have been allayed by the receipt of a letter in town, dated 6th inst., at Monterey, informing us of their arrival there without sustaining any loss.—Flag.

HAILING THE TEXIAN.—By an arrival yesterday from Camargo, we are informed that an order had been received there from Gen. Taylor, directing a halt of the heavy waggon trains which were being got ready for Monterey, and which it was supposed were intended for the march upon San Luis. We cannot learn whether the dangers of the road, or a final resolve not to make any further advance with the army, has induced this order. The latter circumstance we judge the latter cause to have dictated it. We have no further news by this arrival from the army.—Ib.

LOCUS NATURÆ.—There can be seen in this city a letter of animals combining both the fable and a sensible race, being the offspring of the common horse and the small hog dog. The mother is now rearing these singular animals, and bestows upon them as much affection as though they were fully her own race. The ears and head are purely feline, but all other portions canine. The whine is sorry, like the kitten than the puppy, and in their efforts at play or fight they have the traits of the cat.—Ib.

BONAPARTE—A Lesson of Wisdom.—Count Montholon's book on Bonaparte has lately been republished. We are indebted to the good nature of the editor of the Boston Post for an extract from it, which he laudately quoted before the readers of that paper, which cannot fail to awaken feelings that all ought to cherish. The extract we refer to was one of those conversations, in which Bonaparte frequently indulged, well calculated to ventilate wisdom to his hearers, and in which, we may feel assured, he spoke with the utmost sincerity.—New Orleans Republican.

THE LORD'S PRAYER.—We lay before our readers the Lord's Prayer, beautifully paraphrased into [illegible] verse, by Thomas Stansefield, a soldier of the 26th regiment U. S. Infantry, and a prisoner of war in the province of Upper Canada:

Our Lord and King who reigns enthroned on high,
Father in heav'n mysterious deity!
Who art the great I AM, the last, the first,
Art righteous, holy, merciful and just,
In resplendence glory, seemest where angels sing,
Hearest the dwelling place of God and King,
Hallowed thy name, which doth all others transcend,
Be thou adored our great Almighty Friend,
Thy Glory shines on land and creature's space,
Where in the heavens or earth, is not thy face?
Thy Kingdom rules o'er beyond the starry skies;
Kingdom, satanic fall, but thou shalt rise,
Come let thine empire, O thou Holy one,
Thy great and everlasting will be done!
Will God and King who plans of God and King,
Both the work of mortals to obey!
Done in the great, the wondrous works of love,
On Calvary's cross he died, his reliance above,
Earth bears for record in thy holy word,
As in heaven, so earth, O Lord!
It shines unto midnight in the eternal space,
It praised in Heaven, for ever the Saviour dies.
In songs immortal magnified his name,
Heaven dwells with joy and saints the love proclaim.
Give us, O Lord, our food, nor cease to give:
Us that food in which our souls may live!
This be our boon to day and days to come,
Day without end in our eternal home!
Day by day we ask, yet Lord, thy blessings lend,
Daily assist and aid us when we pray!
Bread though we ask, yet Lord, thy blessings lend,
And make us grateful when thy gifts descend.
Forgive our sins, which in debt to trespass place
To us the children of a great judge,
Our fellow faults and trespasses forgive,
Debts which we never can give, of their receive.
As we, O Lord, our neighbors faults debate
We beg thou do likewise from thy memory's book,
Forgive us, O Lord, as second and as first,
Our souls to save, which Adam's guilty race,
Heirs to their [illegible] Love,
And in that duty paid by adam's race,
Lead us into temptation, but deliver us!
Lead us in temptation and the [illegible] ways,
Watch our vows, but in his name who bled,
Into thine own, we pour our every need.
Temptation's fiend changes help us to shun,
That now we conquer through thy conquering Son!

Amen.

Further, in that all which can annoy
Us in this world and deny our souls destroy,
From all calamities which men betide,
Kill and death, O turn our foot aside!
For we are mortal women and objects to decay
To this we ask and mortals to obey:
To this we ask and mortals to obey
Be not thy mercy, Lord, forever free!
The whole creation Amen to God but thee,
Kingdom of eternities to thy presence falls,
For thine Kingdom is the reign the King of all.
Power, in this time—to thee be glory given,
And be thy glory first by earth and Heaven
The praise of Saints and angels in thine own,
Glory to Thee, this everlasting Throne
Forever and forever more be thine!
Amen Humpty Followed to the Divine!
