We welcome to the ranks of city journalism the new candidate for public favor, the Daily New, the first number of which was published yesterday. The proprietors of the paper are Mesers, J. H. Keefe & Co., whose prospectas indicates that the News will be conducted upon principles, which, if faithfully adhered to, will, no doubt, secure the success of the enterprise. We infer from the following extract that the News will assume no decided political character: "We have little to say on the subject of politica, except that, as southern men, we surve to prove our devotion to the South rather by building up its strength and restoring its frater nities than by becoming the partitions of any who would arrive to keep alive the distracting and pernicions issues of the past.
