New Orleans Bee

Office, 73 Chartres street. NEW ORLEANS, FRIDAY MORNING, AUGUST 15, 1862. Vol. XVII—New Series . Vol XXXV.—Whole No 12,456.

NEW ORLEANS:
FRIDAY MORNING, AUGUST 15, 1862.

NOTES OF THE DAYS.

To-day, August 15th, is the anniversary of the birth of Napoleon Bonaparte, at Ajaccio in Corsica, in 1769; and also of his investment with the civil power of assuming his successor, and of appointing two consuls and Consuls, and nominating a large number of additional functionaries, &c., in 1802. The speedy abrogation of the greater number of the cruel and unjust laws enacted by the revolutionists—the uprooting of the French army, carrying artillery and baggage on their shoulders, across the Alps—the passage of Mont St. Bernard—the battle of Marengo—the conquest of Piedmont and the consequences of the sanguinary repulse of Napoleon at First Consul at Boulogne, and of the Legion of Honor—the general result of all these—the period of ten years for which the Consulate had been in the first instance created—nominated extended for life—the consequent and early rupture of the peace of Amiens between England and France—the condemnation of Georges and his accomplices, the brutal murder of the Duke d'Enghien, and the pretence that he was at the head of the conspiracy against the First Consul and his regime, for which Georges and his accomplices suffered, while the simple Duke was murdered—the Consulate was the last of the line of Bourbons descended from the Great Condé, and was a span of mind, genius, talent, and interruption—all the leading events which signalized the Consulate.

The same date is the anniversary of the proposition in the French Assembly in 1793, of the feast or mason, which, grafted the foundation of the famous but ephemeral consecration fest of Napoleon.

It is also the anniversary of the ordering of the French and American Eagles to be united and hung up together in the hall of the Assembly of the French Convention in 1794, and of the inauguration of James Monroe as President, from the United States.

Another event of which this 15th of August is the anniversary is the assault on Fort Erie by the British troops, under Colonel Drummond, who were repulsed with great loss in 1814. The attack commenced at two o'clock in the morning, and it was a parley of the British orders that no quarter should be given. The action was desperate and bloody; the British lost, according to report, 57 killed, 309 wounded and 539 prisoners; another account they lost 222 killed, 174 missing, 565 wounded and 186 prisoners. Lieutenant-General Gordon killed at Snake Hill. Colonel Drummond was killed, acting as in his barbarous order, when a wounded American officer asked quarter, he shot him with a pistol. Wharnpoon, a soldier, pealed his piece and shot Drummond in the head.

Among the notable deaths of which to-day is the anniversary, is that of the illustrious Thomas Fuller, the quaint and interesting author of "The Worthies of England," and of all such among the most absurd readers unless one is as learned as that he could repeat a sermon verbatim once hearing it. It need scarcely be said to any but the veriest [illegible] that Fuller is entitled to be ranked with those which are [illegible] the power of reciting from memory [illegible] a whole number of the London Times on once reading it: to Julius Hahn the power of writing sufficient to fill two pages of the same paper in an hour; and to the famous lecturer on memory, because the absence of mind to forget his umbrella on a rainy day. They may serve the vacuous purposes of small talk: there their value ceases.

The 15th of August is the festival of the Assumption of the Virgin Mary, observed in the Roman Catholic and Greek Churches, and known in the Protestant Episcopal Church, by some of the miraculous events of the Virgin Mary into heaven. Barnaby Goore has the following lines upon this day, in the English version of Naogeorgus:

The [illegible] Virgin Mother lost forth from the pillar
Whereby [illegible] from the earth, she did the heavens
[illegible] of heartsorrel drench the people fast
[illegible] patient all hasted thither for pardon
That Hostile they and wounds until it to Jesus wished.
And saints make them to believe miscommending on
For sin no strivegrate by them hourly are wrought,
And cast into [illegible] of [illegible] to [illegible] all
harmes,
And every pitiousfull griefe from man, or hour, for the,
Far otherwise than nature or the words of God doth
tell."

Bishop Hall also informs us, of this festival, that upon this day it was customary to have plove blessings upon herbes, plants, seeds and fruits."

Prime among the events by which it is marked, August the 15th, is the anniversary, we cannot refrain from giving the unpremeditated [illegible] was inflicted on this city as on the whole country in 1853, in reference to the [illegible] Asylum ball. We give below a copy of the [illegible] which appeared in the contemporary [illegible] and give the [illegible] appears to be correct:

THE NEW ORLEANS INTELLIGENCER—SUPPLEMENT.
NEW ORLEANS FURNISHED—THE SEBASTOPOL CABLE WORKING—RECEPTION—THE QUEEN'S MESSAGE TO THE EMPEROR.
[By the Atlantic Cable.]

The following is a copy of the [illegible] transmitted to the President by the Queen of Great Britain, over the Submarine Telegraph Line:

To H. E. President of the United States:
Her Majesty desires to congratulate the President upon the successful completion of this great [illegible] work, in which the Queen [illegible] on the deep sea.

The Southern Legislature [illegible] the National working badly, or we should give the President's reply, which has already been transmitted.

In connection with the same event, there was another rather inadvertent faux pas made by our contemporary, Mayor Bibb, to celebrate the occasion with becoming honor, and in consonance with general observance throughout the country, telegraphed by telegraph a toast to be proposed for a dinner at New York, given on account of the event. The toast was to Lord [illegible] as follows:

Due advocate, fulgure est mare bisset.

We will only say of the sentiment, that it is not of THAT speech to the obligation of Latin, but reads very much like a laughing response at an hexameter.

This, for the edification of study readers, the editors, undertook to translate; but being too far off from their boyish days to recall the practice in Latin, they strewed their hat together in the middle of the room, by means of the [illegible] of the waste-basket, and running [illegible] laying present on tongue of the vowel, by means of caesura. The other was of course down found out; although nothing was said about it, [illegible] was in vogue a few years ago among [illegible] readers; and there was no reason why we may not in particular from the adoption [illegible] for the occasion, as there were precedents [illegible] one of the Walter Scotts and [illegible] latter wrote a Latin sketch for [illegible] favorite greyhound Maida's tomb after her decease, and in it wrote Maida in os et desiderio, taking to be short, instead of long, as it is. Lockhart would have fallen among the [illegible] not a little, had it been known that the [illegible] was his; and Sir Walter, knowing this, generously assumed the [illegible] Lockhart's Errors will occur.

The 15th of August is [illegible] St. Roche's day. Among the [illegible] the Churchwardens' Accounts of St. Michael [illegible] Bristol, in the city of York, printed in [illegible] Illustrations of Ancient Manners, Drama, [illegible] —1666. Paid for writing of St. Roches Book 3d." On this passage, Pegge, by whom the extracts were communicated, remarks, "St. Roche (St Roche, (Aug. 16) Q. Why commemorated in the Scalar? There is Roche Abbey, in the West Riding of the county of York, which does not take its name from the Saint, but from its situation on a rock, and is dedicated, says Tanner, to the Virgin Mary. The writing probably means making a new copy of the evidences pertained to the day. Dr. Whitaker thinks that St. Roche or Rochus Day was celebrated as a general harvest home. In Sir Thomas Overbury's Characters, 1630, under that of the Franklin, he says: Herodotus of honest Franklins, who thinks not the house of the God may thing complete, or the worse for it, though the covering of [illegible] thence in the church yard after every [illegible] Sunday, and the wake in summer, [illegible] the whitehall hotches on Christmas Eve, the baby, or seed cake, there he yearly [illegible] yet yields them no reliques of Popery." Brande [illegible] antiquities connected with "Rode Monday" as a substitute for Heck Monday," but there is a passage in Warner's Albion England, as follows:

[illegible] and Five Mayden queene of Peg Who robbe [illegible] and [illegible]
[illegible] daily flowre for the Gallight Rode Monday yat [illegible]
[illegible] Lord dancers, christmas gam'sters, with the hobby horse,
[illegible] Rode.

On the 16th of August, 1791, the first number of New England Palladium was published by [illegible] Franklin.

On the same date, in 1774, Kosciusko, the [illegible] Pole, [illegible] the service of [illegible] and [illegible] in France.

On the 15th of August, 1812, [illegible] Russians were [illegible] the British by Gen. Hull, without [illegible] resembling an affair. The American force [illegible] consisted to 1100 men. The British got [illegible] cannons, 2500 [illegible] of arms, 600 [illegible] shot and fixed, 40 [illegible] powder, 100,000 [illegible] cartridges [illegible], and fifteen days' [illegible]

The anniversary of August, is the anniversary of the [illegible] of Napoleon, at Ajaccio in Corsica, in 1769; and also of his investment with the civil power of assuming his successor, and of appointing two consuls and Consuls, and nominating a large number of additional functionaries, &c., in 1802. The speedy abrogation of the greater number of the cruel and unjust laws enacted by the revolutionists—the uprooting of the French army, carrying artillery and baggage on their shoulders, across the Alps—the passage of Mont St. Bernard—the battle of Marengo—the conquest of Piedmont and the consequences of the sanguinary repulse of Napoleon at First Consul at Boulogne, and of the Legion of Honor—the general result of all these—the period of ten years for which the Consulate had been in the first instance created—nominated extended for life—the consequent and early rupture of the peace of Amiens between England and France—the condemnation of Georges and his accomplices, the brutal murder of the Duke d'Enghien, and the pretence that he was at the head of the conspiracy against the First Consul and his regime, for which Georges and his accomplices suffered, while the simple Duke was murdered—the Consulate was the last of the line of Bourbons descended from the Great Condé, and was a span of mind, genius, talent, and interruption—all the leading events which signalized the Consulate.

The same date is the anniversary of the proposition in the French Assembly in 1793, of the feast or mason, which, grafted the foundation of the famous but ephemeral consecration fest of Napoleon.

It is also the anniversary of the ordering of the French and American Eagles to be united and hung up together in the hall of the Assembly of the French Convention in 1794, and of the inauguration of James Monroe as President, from the United States.

Another event of which this 15th of August is the anniversary is the assault on Fort Erie by the British troops, under Colonel Drummond, who were repulsed with great loss in 1814. The attack commenced at two o'clock in the morning, and it was a parley of the British orders that no quarter should be given. The action was desperate and bloody; the British lost, according to report, 57 killed, 309 wounded and 539 prisoners; another account they lost 222 killed, 174 missing, 565 wounded and 186 prisoners. Lieutenant-General Gordon killed at Snake Hill. Colonel Drummond was killed, acting as in his barbarous order, when a wounded American officer asked quarter, he shot him with a pistol. Wharnpoon, a soldier, pealed his piece and shot Drummond in the head.

Among the notable deaths of which to-day is the anniversary, is that of the illustrious Thomas Fuller, the quaint and interesting author of "The Worthies of England," and of all such among the most absurd readers unless one is as learned as that he could repeat a sermon verbatim once hearing it. It need scarcely be said to any but the veriest [illegible] that Fuller is entitled to be ranked with those which are [illegible] the power of reciting from memory [illegible] a whole number of the London Times on once reading it: to Julius Hahn the power of writing sufficient to fill two pages of the same paper in an hour; and to the famous lecturer on memory, because the absence of mind to forget his umbrella on a rainy day. They may serve the vacuous purposes of small talk: there their value ceases.

The 15th of August is the festival of the Assumption of the Virgin Mary, observed in the Roman Catholic and Greek Churches, and known in the Protestant Episcopal Church, by some of the miraculous events of the Virgin Mary into heaven. Barnaby Goore has the following lines upon this day, in the English version of Naogeorgus:

The [illegible] Virgin Mother lost forth from the pillar
Whereby [illegible] from the earth, she did the heavens
[illegible] of heartsorrel drench the people fast
[illegible] patient all hasted thither for pardon
That Hostile they and wounds until it to Jesus wished.
And saints make them to believe miscommending on
For sin no strivegrate by them hourly are wrought,
And cast into [illegible] of [illegible] to [illegible] all
harmes,
And every pitiousfull griefe from man, or hour, for the,
Far otherwise than nature or the words of God doth
tell."

Bishop Hall also informs us, of this festival, that upon this day it was customary to have plove blessings upon herbes, plants, seeds and fruits."

Prime among the events by which it is marked, August the 15th, is the anniversary, we cannot refrain from giving the unpremeditated [illegible] was inflicted on this city as on the whole country in 1853, in reference to the [illegible] Asylum ball. We give below a copy of the [illegible] which appeared in the contemporary [illegible] and give the [illegible] appears to be correct:

THE NEW ORLEANS INTELLIGENCER—SUPPLEMENT.
NEW ORLEANS FURNISHED—THE SEBASTOPOL CABLE WORKING—RECEPTION—THE QUEEN'S MESSAGE TO THE EMPEROR.
[By the Atlantic Cable.]

The following is a copy of the [illegible] transmitted to the President by the Queen of Great Britain, over the Submarine Telegraph Line:

To H. E. President of the United States:
Her Majesty desires to congratulate the President upon the successful completion of this great [illegible] work, in which the Queen [illegible] on the deep sea.

The Southern Legislature [illegible] the National working badly, or we should give the President's reply, which has already been transmitted.

In connection with the same event, there was another rather inadvertent faux pas made by our contemporary, Mayor Bibb, to celebrate the occasion with becoming honor, and in consonance with general observance throughout the country, telegraphed by telegraph a toast to be proposed for a dinner at New York, given on account of the event. The toast was to Lord [illegible] as follows:

Due advocate, fulgure est mare bisset.

We will only say of the sentiment, that it is not of THAT speech to the obligation of Latin, but reads very much like a laughing response at an hexameter.

This, for the edification of study readers, the editors, undertook to translate; but being too far off from their boyish days to recall the practice in Latin, they strewed their hat together in the middle of the room, by means of the [illegible] of the waste-basket, and running [illegible] laying present on tongue of the vowel, by means of caesura. The other was of course down found out; although nothing was said about it, [illegible] was in vogue a few years ago among [illegible] readers; and there was no reason why we may not in particular from the adoption [illegible] for the occasion, as there were precedents [illegible] one of the Walter Scotts and [illegible] latter wrote a Latin sketch for [illegible] favorite greyhound Maida's tomb after her decease, and in it wrote Maida in os et desiderio, taking to be short, instead of long, as it is. Lockhart would have fallen among the [illegible] not a little, had it been known that the [illegible] was his; and Sir Walter, knowing this, generously assumed the [illegible] Lockhart's Errors will occur.

The 15th of August is [illegible] St. Roche's day. Among the [illegible] the Churchwardens' Accounts of St. Michael [illegible] Bristol, in the city of York, printed in [illegible] Illustrations of Ancient Manners, Drama, [illegible] —1666. Paid for writing of St. Roches Book 3d." On this passage, Pegge, by whom the extracts were communicated, remarks, "St. Roche (St Roche, (Aug. 16) Q. Why commemorated in the Scalar? There is Roche Abbey, in the West Riding of the county of York, which does not take its name from the Saint, but from its situation on a rock, and is dedicated, says Tanner, to the Virgin Mary. The writing probably means making a new copy of the evidences pertained to the day. Dr. Whitaker thinks that St. Roche or Rochus Day was celebrated as a general harvest home. In Sir Thomas Overbury's Characters, 1630, under that of the Franklin, he says: Herodotus of honest Franklins, who thinks not the house of the God may thing complete, or the worse for it, though the covering of [illegible] thence in the church yard after every [illegible] Sunday, and the wake in summer, [illegible] the whitehall hotches on Christmas Eve, the baby, or seed cake, there he yearly [illegible] yet yields them no reliques of Popery." Brande [illegible] antiquities connected with "Rode Monday" as a substitute for Heck Monday," but there is a passage in Warner's Albion England, as follows:

[illegible] and Five Mayden queene of Peg Who robbe [illegible] and [illegible]
[illegible] daily flowre for the Gallight Rode Monday yat [illegible]
[illegible] Lord dancers, christmas gam'sters, with the hobby horse,
[illegible] Rode.

On the 16th of August, 1791, the first number of New England Palladium was published by [illegible] Franklin.

On the same date, in 1774, Kosciusko, the [illegible] Pole, [illegible] the service of [illegible] and [illegible] in France.

On the 15th of August, 1812, [illegible] Russians were [illegible] the British by Gen. Hull, without [illegible] resembling an affair. The American force [illegible] consisted to 1100 men. The British got [illegible] cannons, 2500 [illegible] of arms, 600 [illegible] shot and fixed, 40 [illegible] powder, 100,000 [illegible] cartridges [illegible], and fifteen days' [illegible]

CITY INTELLIGENCE.

Marine Departures.—Steam. F. Stout, E. B. Bradley, David North, J. Thompson and [illegible]—Mayfield, steam chartered by [illegible] Butler and the rebels to convey support from [illegible] the rebels to Vicksburg, left [illegible] Thursday night, and a number of [illegible] the steamboats suddenly [illegible] down on every [illegible] and sent a [illegible] of shot among them, by which Bradley was wounded in the upper part of the arm, and North in the shoulder and head. Both were [illegible] and [illegible] safe. We give below a copy of the [illegible] which appeared in the contemporary [illegible] and give the [illegible] appears to be correct:

THE NEW ORLEANS INTELLIGENCER—SUPPLEMENT.
NEW ORLEANS FURNISHED—THE SEBASTOPOL CABLE WORKING—RECEPTION—THE QUEEN'S MESSAGE TO THE EMPEROR.
[By the Atlantic Cable.]

The following is a copy of the [illegible] transmitted to the President by the Queen of Great Britain, over the Submarine Telegraph Line:

To H. E. President of the United States:
Her Majesty desires to congratulate the President upon the successful completion of this great [illegible] work, in which the Queen [illegible] on the deep sea.

The Southern Legislature [illegible] the National working badly, or we should give the President's reply, which has already been transmitted.

In connection with the same event, there was another rather inadvertent faux pas made by our contemporary, Mayor Bibb, to celebrate the occasion with becoming honor, and in consonance with general observance throughout the country, telegraphed by telegraph a toast to be proposed for a dinner at New York, given on account of the event. The toast was to Lord [illegible] as follows:

Due advocate, fulgure est mare bisset.

We will only say of the sentiment, that it is not of THAT speech to the obligation of Latin, but reads very much like a laughing response at an hexameter.

This, for the edification of study readers, the editors, undertook to translate; but being too far off from their boyish days to recall the practice in Latin, they strewed their hat together in the middle of the room, by means of the [illegible] of the waste-basket, and running [illegible] laying present on tongue of the vowel, by means of caesura. The other was of course down found out; although nothing was said about it, [illegible] was in vogue a few years ago among [illegible] readers; and there was no reason why we may not in particular from the adoption [illegible] for the occasion, as there were precedents [illegible] one of the Walter Scotts and [illegible] latter wrote a Latin sketch for [illegible] favorite greyhound Maida's tomb after her decease, and in it wrote Maida in os et desiderio, taking to be short, instead of long, as it is. Lockhart would have fallen among the [illegible] not a little, had it been known that the [illegible] was his; and Sir Walter, knowing this, generously assumed the [illegible] Lockhart's Errors will occur.

The 15th of August is [illegible] St. Roche's day. Among the [illegible] the Churchwardens' Accounts of St. Michael [illegible] Bristol, in the city of York, printed in [illegible] Illustrations of Ancient Manners, Drama, [illegible] —1666. Paid for writing of St. Roches Book 3d." On this passage, Pegge, by whom the extracts were communicated, remarks, "St. Roche (St Roche, (Aug. 16) Q. Why commemorated in the Scalar? There is Roche Abbey, in the West Riding of the county of York, which does not take its name from the Saint, but from its situation on a rock, and is dedicated, says Tanner, to the Virgin Mary. The writing probably means making a new copy of the evidences pertained to the day. Dr. Whitaker thinks that St. Roche or Rochus Day was celebrated as a general harvest home. In Sir Thomas Overbury's Characters, 1630, under that of the Franklin, he says: Herodotus of honest Franklins, who thinks not the house of the God may thing complete, or the worse for it, though the covering of [illegible] thence in the church yard after every [illegible] Sunday, and the wake in summer, [illegible] the whitehall hotches on Christmas Eve, the baby, or seed cake, there he yearly [illegible] yet yields them no reliques of Popery." Brande [illegible] antiquities connected with "Rode Monday" as a substitute for Heck Monday," but there is a passage in Warner's Albion England, as follows:

[illegible] and Five Mayden queene of Peg Who robbe [illegible] and [illegible]
[illegible] daily flowre for the Gallight Rode Monday yat [illegible]
[illegible] Lord dancers, christmas gam'sters, with the hobby horse,
[illegible] Rode.

On the 16th of August, 1791, the first number of New England Palladium was published by [illegible] Franklin.

On the same date, in 1774, Kosciusko, the [illegible] Pole, [illegible] the service of [illegible] and [illegible] in France.

On the 15th of August, 1812, [illegible] Russians were [illegible] the British by Gen. Hull, without [illegible] resembling an affair. The American force [illegible] consisted to 1100 men. The British got [illegible] cannons, 2500 [illegible] of arms, 600 [illegible] shot and fixed, 40 [illegible] powder, 100,000 [illegible] cartridges [illegible], and fifteen days' [illegible]

Arrest of Nun.—This famous subject was arraigned at [illegible] Justice from the Custom-House, charged with [illegible] from the Custom-House boathouse in the [illegible] to assist [illegible] demonstrations within the [illegible] of the [illegible] when arrested was wearing [illegible] Lieutenant Lee, of the [illegible] Navy, who [illegible] the prisoner in a house opposite [illegible] in the [illegible] and [illegible] arrested him. But as soon as he [illegible] that his [illegible] [illegible] he [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]