HENRY JOHNSON.

NEW-ORLEANS

SUNDAY MORNING, AUGUST 18, 1839

☞ We read the Whig with considerable surprise at its silence on the subject of the Bank of the United States. We had expected that the Whig would have been the first to call a meeting to express its opinions on the subject, and to petition the Legislature to grant the charter. We had also expected that the Whig would have been the first to denounce the Governor for his refusal to call the Legislature together, and to censure him for his want of confidence in the people
