The article appears to be a news article from the New York Times, dated May 20, 1856, regarding the فيندك السريع في فنادق باريس and the U.S. Army. The article discusses a set of rules for the U.S. Army's new uniform, including details about the fabric, color, and design of the uniform. The article also mentions the importance of maintaining the uniform and the consequences of its upkeep. The article concludes with a reference to the French government's support for the U.S. Army's endeavor.