A GIRL WITH FLOCK.

She Used it to Play a Prank on the Gentlemen.

A young society girl, about twenty, from New Orleans, recently paid a visit to this city. She had made some purchases in the Northern States and was returning by the Western road, via Chicago. She was a very pretty girl, and in her small, neat, dress, she seemed to be a very pleasant and unassuming nature.

There were not more than a dozen persons in the car with her, and she was perfectly unacquainted with any of them. She did not know where she was going or what she was going to do. She did not care. She was simply out for a walk and enjoyed the scenery.

She had a small bag with her, and as she passed along, she noticed a gentleman seated in the car. She was a little bewildered, but she decided to make a friendly greeting. She took out a small bag, and as she approached the gentleman, she suddenly threw a flock of birds at him. The gentleman was startled and looked at her in surprise. She smiled and walked away, leaving the gentleman to recover from his surprise.

A CHARLIE-BABY ACCIDENT.

In a small hotel in Chicago, a baby fell from the balcony and broke its leg. The baby was named Charlie and was three years old. The accident occurred while the family was out for a stroll. Charlie had been playing on the balcony, and the family had left him there. When they returned, they found Charlie lying on the ground, crying out in pain. He was rushed to the hospital, where he was diagnosed with a broken leg.

The family was shocked and devastated by the accident. They had been so careful and had made sure that the baby was always supervised. They were heartbroken to see Charlie in so much pain. The hospital staff worked tirelessly to care for Charlie and help him recover. After several weeks of treatment, Charlie was discharged and returned home.

The accident served as a reminder to the family of the importance of safety. They were determined to be more careful in the future and to ensure that such an accident never happened again.

THE MURDER OF MACKAY.

Mackay, a famous painter, was found dead in his home. The police immediately arrived on the scene and began their investigation. They found no signs of forced entry, and Mackay's body was in a state of decomposition. It appeared that Mackay had been murdered.

The police worked tirelessly to solve the case. They interviewed dozens of people, searched the area, and examined every clue. After weeks of investigation, they finally found the killer. The killer had been living in the same neighborhood as Mackay, and it was believed that he had been jealous of Mackay's success.

The killer was eventually arrested and charged with the murder. The trial was highly publicized, and the killer was found guilty and sentenced to life in prison.

The murder of Mackay shocked the city and highlighted the importance of safety and security in the community. The city took action to improve its safety measures, and the killer's conviction served as a reminder of the consequences of violence.

THE GREAT STEEL OUT?

With the opening of the new steel mill in West Virginia, the steel industry is facing a major challenge. The mill is producing large quantities of high-quality steel, and many experts believe that this will lead to a significant increase in the price of steel.

The steel industry is already facing competition from foreign countries, and the opening of the new mill will only make matters worse. The industry will have to find ways to remain competitive and maintain its profits.

The steel industry is a vital part of the economy, and its success is crucial for the country's economic growth. The industry will have to work hard to adapt to the new market conditions and ensure its long-term survival.
