THE DAILY BEE.

Friday Morning, August 10th, 1855.

The NORTHERN MAIL came through yesterday with the latest dates.

THE WAR.

Paris correspondents in the Crimea of the 1st express write in a somewhat despondent mood of the progress of the siege.—The [illegible] reprise of the Allies on the 18th [illegible] besieging forces, warned by [illegible]ster, of the excessive difficulty of [illegible]ing the outworks of Sebastopol, have [illegible]their plans, and are steadily engaged [illegible]endeavoring to approach the [illegible]k of Tower by the gradual erection of [illegible]nal mines and fortifications. The [illegible]s, we are told, is to abridge the distance [illegible] with the attacking troops will have [illegible]ver to endure a murderous fire of grape [illegible]anister. It is said that a new attempt [illegible]ge the Russians will not be made, [illegible]until the works of the Allies shall have [illegible]advanced to within 60 [illegible] the [illegible]enemy's fortifications. [illegible]ppear that [illegible] fire maintained by the Russians does [illegible]precludes the possibility of working [illegible]the trenches until after sunset; that [illegible]s are remarkably short and but [illegible]ne afforded for labor, and that finally [illegible]t moonlight interferes with the [illegible]s of the besiegers, and allows [illegible]a very brief period for carrying [illegible]ns. Hence, the progress of [illegible]s is exceedingly slow, and despite [illegible]ish desire to regain the laurels lost [illegible]sh, and the burning thirst for vengeance [illegible]nterested by the French army, it is [illegible]anticipated that any thing important [illegible]accomplished for some weeks.

Meanwhile, GORTSCHAKOFF has been largely reinforced. The estimate of the [illegible]s the total number of Russian [illegible]Crimea at full one hundred and [illegible]and men. Neither does it appear [illegible]th any whatever is experienced [illegible]ing this enormous force. The [illegible]of the expeditions to Kertsch [illegible]ctively, so far as cutting off [illegible]e enemy is concerned, has [illegible]n exaggerated. Certain is it [illegible]s remounts, though successfully [illegible]ere not been attended by the [illegible]results. The fact of strong [illegible]s being thrown into the Crimea [illegible]at the Russian generals [illegible]mand of the means of feeding [illegible]. Not that there are other routes [illegible]ne principal part of Russia to Sebastopol [illegible]Sarepta on the Sarawala or Putrid Sea. [illegible]ntelligence from the seat [illegible]ns cannot be considered, renders [illegible]S Sebastopol as doubtful as ever. [illegible]isting that one of the most [illegible]armies in the world, overwhelming numbers profusely supplied [illegible]destructive enginery of war [illegible]s access to the sea constantly [illegible]s appointed and ample fleet, [illegible]regular detachments of troops [illegible]the gap, occasioned by sickness [illegible]ommissary's sword, should linger [illegible]or in mid before the walls of a [illegible]y thousand souls, and after having [illegible]ght many bloody battles, and made [illegible]s sacrifices, that this army [illegible]rable as it is, should yet be [illegible]e within and earthen re[illegible]s is even so. The Allies [illegible]ve Sebastopol is a series [illegible]s of immense strength, erected [illegible]n exquisite skill, and defended by a [illegible]persevering courage that challenges admiration. They have failed too, [illegible]s under the climate operates [illegible]m, because a divided command [illegible]s unanimity and continuous [illegible]ly hinders have given [illegible]e to organize resistance, and [illegible]operation and success, according [illegible]e military authorities, the [illegible]s change has been radically [illegible]. Whether the future will induce [illegible]n this respect, or whether [illegible]s on the dogged determination [illegible]ake Sebastopol by main force, [illegible]y cannot yet be decided. In [illegible]e Autumn is approaching, [illegible]e fevers of the Crimea will [illegible]e contests on the Allies than the [illegible]e Russians.

[illegible]s.—The telegraphic despatches received yesterday are very favorable [illegible]e American party. The returns from [illegible]s are remarkably bright, but we can [illegible]y nothing about the result, until the Northern [illegible]ts of strong Democratic counties is heard from. In the Middle District the American party will have a majority of Congressmen, and North Carolina the same is so no. In [illegible]e Legislature is tremendously [illegible]s nearly same years ago, as in every [illegible]s a very slim chance. Nevertheless [illegible]e better appear to have carried [illegible]s elections, and, greatest triumph of all, [illegible]e utter prostration of Gamaliel and [illegible]s Cronies. So much is for! From [illegible]e intelligence is auspicious, but [illegible]s to commit so many mistakes, that [illegible]s exposed to blunder till we are out [illegible]s. Perhaps despatches may be received [illegible]ow this is written and the [illegible]s of the year, that will settle the [illegible]s. Whatever may be the result, the [illegible]e American party by a decisive [illegible]

GREAT AMERICAN BARBECUE AT THIBODEAUX!

Five Thousand Americans in the Field!

A [illegible]s barbecue at Thibodeaux yesterday [illegible]which will long be remembered [illegible]e Louisiana. The children of [illegible]s turned out in such numbers and celebrated the occasion in a manner as we [illegible]ticipated. At 10 o'clock yesterday morning, [illegible]ds Acadia, converging about [illegible]s, met at Thibodeaux at [illegible]. At 11 o'clock and joined the assemblage [illegible]Lafourche and other parishes, which [illegible]ed in upwards of three thousand persons. They arrived at Thibodeaux at [illegible]'clock and joined the assemblage [illegible]Lafourche and other parishes, which [illegible]s a procession of some thousand persons. The meeting was finally called to order [illegible]r. White, Mayor of Thibodeaux, who was [illegible]s elected President of the meeting. H. R. G Thibodeaux, Hon. E. S. Kerrigan, F. E. Kemp, Captain R. E. Darden, Wm. Hunter, L. Daudt, H. E. Degas and L. Badeaux were elected Vice Presidents. J. R. Thompson and H Regan

Hon. Chase Derbigny, the American candidate, then took the stand and addressed the meeting, and was received with great [illegible]s. He was followed by George Eustis, Esq. Mr. Eustis began his discourse by a review of the Democratic party as it is constituted at present, pointing out its heterogeneous [illegible]s, and disclaiming the idea that it had a [illegible]y right to assume the name, inasmuch as it [illegible]s not a thorough conservative guard of native [illegible]s, and is made up principally of adventurers [illegible]s and a few discontented whigs [illegible]s united that Andrew Jackson, if alive, would [illegible]d to be considered as a democrat of the [illegible]s, and insisted that they should be styled [illegible]ist American party. He then proceeded [illegible]s to point by point the objections to the [illegible]n party. He first replied to the remarks of Mr. Wickliffe and Mr. Mouse, on the subject of secret societies, and endeavored to [illegible]e the attitude of jealous [illegible]s of the American party which apply with equal force to all the [illegible]s of the country. He then examined [illegible]s that there are two Congresses, and [illegible]ed that the same [illegible]s exist in the Constitutions of the United States [illegible]e Legislatures of the American party, and [illegible]s which apply to all the proceedings in [illegible]e United States Senate on the subject of [illegible]s and the reserved powers. He then examined [illegible]s taken against the party for [illegible]ting that the doctrine that Americans should be governed by Americans. He showed [illegible]t that was startling when was natural, [illegible]ust and honorable in every nation, and which was [illegible]ted in our social organizations—[illegible]ords were no reason why America should stand alone and bare as an exception to the rest of mankind and be governed by any other than Americans. He alluded briefly to [illegible]s which led to the organization of the American party, which, while it disclaims [illegible]ctility to foreign born, opposes their intervention in the affairs of the nation.

As to the charge made by the Anti-American party that the Louisiana Platform inculcates hatred to Catholics and the creation of a religious test, Mr. Eustis pronounced this false in every respect. He then read the 9th article of the Platform, and showed that Mr. Wickliffe's [illegible]s made in the New Orleans speech, [illegible]s shown in a few words that Mr. Mouse has gouged the Louisiana Platform altogether. He concluded his remarks by entreating his friends of the order, in the name of the future of the country, to the sublimest our endangered position, and to the name of our wronged and bleeding nationality to come up like men and like Americans in the November contest, reminding them that Lafayette expects her sons to do their duty. We regret that the intensity of the hour prevents our giving a fuller synopsis of Mr. Eustis' able and eloquent speech. He sat down in the midst of great applause.

Hon. Bernard Marigny, Louis Derbigneul, Esq., and Col. Christy followed, the two former speaking in French, but we have not time to notice their remarks at this hour. At 5 o'clock a sumptuous repast was partaken of by the ladies, which were near at hand, covered with substantial edibles, to which the fullest justice was done. At about 7 o'clock in the evening the company bound for New Orleans left the Bayou Lafourche on the cars, but owing to the length of the train did not get to the city until near 12 o'clock. The harmony of the hour prevents our giving a fuller notice of the meeting this morning.

[FOR THE BEE]

A SOUTHERN PARTY.

The organization of a Southern party, embracing all the old parties uniting on a Southern platform, is now proposed, and meets the approbation of some of the most distinguished men of the South—Stephens, Toombs, Quitman, Rusk, Benjamin and others, have given it their sanction, and thrown the weight of their justly merited reputation in its favor. With such an array against them, men of less conspicuous and honorable position, might well shrink from the expression of an adverse opinion. But the [illegible] is a movement one, involving nothing [illegible] was we have a perfect right to do, and the repeal would be a wanton violation of every principle of right and justice.

If then, the abolition party is to be formed to prevent the repeal of this law, it will fail to accomplish that object. As eminent gentleman has stated as his "deliberate conviction," that an attempt would be made in the next House of Representatives to force the repeal of the Fugitive Slave and Nebraska bill s, by tacking them to the general appropriation bills, as a last experiment, and defeat the bill or pass it in that form. If that is the fact, no Southern party can prevent it. The character of the House is now determined, or will be in the 33d Congress. The party, if now organized, could not by any effort change the character of the House, and may thereby so advance itself, it appears to me, rather facilitate than retard the repeal

With due deference to the gentleman, (for whom I entertain the highest personal regard, not only with that every intelligent man is partial as he is,) I do not apprehend the same result that he does. The general appropriation bill will be passed without the repeal. The amendment may be introduced and a stormy time ensue, but the
