I. THOMAS,
THOS. C. NICHOLLS,
SAML. D. DIXON.

We received no mail yesterday; an excuse, we hope, for the miserable appearance of our paper today.

The cry is still they come!—The editor of the Louisiana Advertiser who shines, uneclipsed, in native dullness;—whose very soul sickens at the bare name of common sense;—who has hitherto, pendulum-like, staggered, unscourged, along his path, secure in the protecting fold of his native nothingnesss, has talked himself into a godling, in his yesterday's sheet, and sounded his warrison against the Bee.—Does the Louisiana affect the [illegible]; we dare him to the strife; we shall bide his attack, in sober mood, though he do champion us to the utterance.

But before we come to the contest, we shall ask him one question, by way of proem. Does the editor of the Louisiana understand the full import of the word contempt, which he invites the Mayor to pour on the Bee? We shall tell him; for we believe that he does not: "Know thyself," is not an adage, generally understood. Contempt is the reward of him, who, in the transient, partial glimmerings of reeling reason, seemingly advocates one party Contempt! the reward of him, who, when the heart is unpacked by the influences of deep libations, brawls unmannerly in behalf of an opposite cause. Contempt! the inquisitorial iron-wreath, which withers the brow of him, who prostitutes, by shameless orgies, the dignity of human nature. Contempt! 'tis the heir-loom of the BARDOLPH of the Louisiana Aduertiser—not of him who is too proud to flatter—too sincere to lie—too independent to truckle.—The Louisiana has forced us into the defensive; we shall move him such a guerilla war, that the 22d of February shall to him, however dear to others, stand "accursed in the calendar of time!"

A friendly word to the Mercantile—An inviolable determination to oppose, with all the powers of mind and body, all attempts to convulse popular feeling; an unshaken resolution to foster, by all means, unison and harmony among the citizens of New Orleans, such is our settled purpose, such has it been, loudly and unequivocally, published. After this profession of faith, we had thought that our opinions could not be misapprehended. The Mercantile argues the contrary; and that, too, from a most trivial circumstance. By what chain of reasoning,—by what aries of mental speculations such an inference could have been drawn, we confess that our most taxed ingenuity cannot discover. But to be plain—to give no chance to honest, or calculating recrimination we once, for all, aver, that the fautors of dispersion, on either side, shall ever find uncompromising opponents, in the conductors of the Bee.—We might, did we not deem this reiterated avowal more than sufficient, answer the Mercantile, ad hoc; but as it is, we are satisfied, with charging him, retrieve his error, and sin no more on this head: nole anplius peccare.

The Feast of Belshazzar, which Mr. Reinagle's faithful brush has spread, with all the vividness of correct painting, on the living canvass, is now exhibiting at the Mariner's Church. Time will not allow us to enter into the details of a chef-d'œuvre, which is stamped with the mark of genius; but we can recommend our readers to visit the impressive creation of the artist, conscious that the examination will not be attended with disappointment.

THE following gentlemen will be supported as Directors of the City Bank by a large majority of the STOCKHOLDERS.

F. Gardére,	J. A. Bordier,
S. J. Peters,	Wm. H. Avery,
A. Rivarde,	C. Lesseps,
W. M. Beal,	Jas. Puech,
R. O. Pritchard,	D. G. Borduzat,
P. E. Newton,	C. Adams, jr

☞ We are authorized to announce, that Messrs. MATTHEW MORGAN and W. A. GASQUET are candidates to represent the first district in the City Council, at the next ensuing election for Aldermen.

Loss of the Packet Ship De Witt Clinton.—The following letter from the commander of the Packet Ship De Witt Clinton, to Messrs Barstow & Adams, her consignees, gives an account of the loss of this vessel off Abaco.

"NASSAU, N. P. Feb. 9, 1832.

"I hope you received my letter of the 5th; informing you of the loss of the De Witt Clinton. She was totally lost on Abaco, the night of the 30th January. She filled in 30 minutes and was entirely in pieces in two hours. Nothing saved dry except Mr Jones' trunk—the letter bag was lost and my clothes. With great difficulty we saved our lives.

Yours,
HENRY PACKARD.

"P. S. We have saved three small lighters of wet goods.

The passengers of the De Witt Clinton, have arrived in this city in the packet ship Natchez.

BRUSSELS, Dec. 20.—The Envoy of the United States in Holland has caused overtures to be made in the name of his government to the Belgian ministry, to learn the bases on which the Belgian government would be inclined to conclude a treaty of commerce with the United States. M. de Bulow, Prussian minister in the conference at London, has made the same overtures to our Envoy at London.—Courrier des Pays Bas.

OLD BAILEY.

Trial of John Bishop, Thos. Williams and Jas. May, for the murder of the Italian Boy.

Such was the anxiety of the public to witness the trial of the prisoners, Bishop, Williams and May, for the "Burking" of the poor Italian boy, Carlo Ferrari, which was appointed to take place this morning, that before day light great numbers crowded the Old Bailey, and the avenues leading into the court were thronged. In fact the court house was besieged, but the sheriff had adopted very prudential measures to prevent the crowd pressing into the court yard, by fastening the gates and stationing officers at every entrance, to protect those whose business required their attendance on the occasion. The demands for admission into the court, we understand, were exorbitant. One and two guineas were asked for a seat in the galleries—and the under sheriffs had issued strict orders to the door keepers, prohibiting them from admitting any except those who had tickets which they had issued—the gentlemen connected with the press, barristers, &c.

About eight o'clock a considerable number of ladies and gentlemen had arrived, and taken their seats in galleries and boxes appropriated in general to the jurors in whiting, who, contrary to the practice for years, we are told, were excluded from the court, except on the same terms the public generally were admitted—by paying.

As soon as the verdict of guilty against the three criminals—Bishop, Williams and May—was made known to the immense crowd that awaited in the Old Bailey to learn the result of the trial, it was received with a general shout of approval. It would be difficult to describe the feeling that was exhibited. The people appeared wild in the expression of their joy; and we never, on any other great public occasion, witnessed so strong or so extravagant a manifestation of disgust at the crime, or gladness at the condemnation of the murderers, as pervaded the entire assemblage. The cheers were frequently renewed, and marked by waving of hats and congratulations; and the crowd, up to a late hour, continued to occupy the streets in the vicinity of Newgate, to which prison the objects of their detestation were re-conveyed after the conclusion of the trial.

The execution of the murderers.—Yesterday morning, at the usual hour, eight o'clock, these miscreants, whose appalling crimes have created such a sensation of horror throughout the kingdom, were hanged in front of the gaol of Newgate, in the presence of a larger assemblage than has ever been congregated within the memory of any person who has been in the habit of attending for the press as witness such revolting [illegible] we may state that, to the best of within the memory of any living being, was such a scene witnessed as the Old Bailey presented yesterday morning. As early as two o'clock, there were at least two thousand persons assembled, and the crowd progressively increased, until it became, as far as the eye could see, one dense mass of human beings, and amongst them were vast numbers of females.

At seven o'clock, just as day was breaking, we were allowed, through the politeness of Mr. Wontner, the highly respectable governor of Newgate, to have a view of the vast multitude from the roof of the prison, and the sight was most extraordinary—surpassing what we witnessed at the execution of Thistlewood; the whole line of street being so entirely filled, that by no possibility did it appear that another person could have found standing room, and the windows and roofs of all the houses from which a view of the place of execution could be commanded were completely occupied.

Not only in the crowd were numbers of the fair sex, but the windows were chiefly filled with them. On the roofs of the houses persons of both sexes had placed themselves in situations of such danger as to excite a strong apprehension for their safety—many having no other safeguard than a hold of the chimney pots, to prevent them from rolling down the sloping roofs. Two hundred special constables were on Sunday sworn in by the Lord Mayor, to do duty immediately round the scaffold, and they received orders to be in attendance, in front of Newgate, at 7 o'clock yesterday morning; but at that hour the approach to the spot was so completely blocked up, that Mr. Brown, the city marshal, was obliged to conduct them in at the Sessions House and from thence through Newgate to the debtors' door.

By some oversight, three chains had been suspended from the [illegible] beam, and this led the crowd to suppose that [illegible] had not been respited. Mr. Wontner, on hearing of the mistake, directed that one of the chains should be removed. The moment this was done, an acclamation of "May is respited,' ran through the crowd, and, contrary to the expected tokens of indignation, distinct cheers were heard among the crowd on witnessing this token that mercy had been extended to May.

Among some of the English periodicals lately received at this office, we find the following letter from MATHEW G. (or more commonly "MONK") LEWIS, addressed to Lord BYRON. It is playful and characteristic of the man though not of his writings.

ORIGINAL LETTER OF MONK LEWIS TO LORD BYRON.

COMO, Sept. 1, 1816.—My dear Byron.—You desired me to send you an account of the present state of Simplon.—I have past it, and in consequence have said to Buonaparte—"Man, be [illegible] thy sins forgiven thee!" So if he can but get the Pope to forgive him the other half, the man is saved. It is in every respect the finest road that I ever traveled, and there was only one bad place near St. Maurice; which will be good before your passing it, for the people are hard at work upon it, and they told me, "they had no time to lose, as a great English Poet-Lord was coming that way very soon;" so you see, you are expected. At least, I conclude, that they must have meant you, for I have heard nothing about Carlile's being on the Continent; and if they did not mean the one of you two, they certainly must have meant the other. Pray, take notice of La Pórte du Cé, an old castle, the Rhone, an island, a chapel, &c. If ever I arrive at hating mankind half as heartily as I despise them, and that old rustic is to be had for love or money, or both; there will I fix my hermitage, turning my back upon the road to show my contempt for society. But, indeed, every moment between Esima and Maggrig is admirable, and admirable, and admirable again. Go to see la Ripaille, near Thonon, for the sake of the Pope-Duke-Friar, and let me know, how you like the ceiling of the chapel, with its groups of fretted cherubim. The effect of it appeared to me excellent. Go to see the hermitage in the rock of St. Maurice, and I hope you will find the two hermits at home; they were absent upon a quête, when I was there, but one of them is blind, and the other a fool, so they must be pure good society, and I trust you will come in for them. Observe, I do not mean a fool, such as one meets in bond Street or at the Opera; but a real natural fool, such as one finds in the work houses and the pulpit. And besides they can work miracles, or something that is almost a miracle, if not quite one; for the old woman who shewed me the hermitage, told me, that a young English Catholic, who is in a pension at Bee, and in a bad state of health, had given the blind hermit a loaf of bread a day to pray for his recovery, and she assured me, that "he already found himself a great deal better." Now I am so very perfect in every respect, that I had no sort of occasion for the hermit's prayers; but left half a crown for him to pray for your lordship, and hope when we meet, that I shall also find you "a great deal better," whether in bodily or mental health, my explaining might, perhaps, be thought too great a liberty, and respect, therefore, fetters my pen. You should sleep at St. Maurice and Brieg, if you can manage it; at any rate contrive to reach Brieg either late in the evening or early in the morning, otherwise you will be obliged to pass part of the Simplon road in the dark, which you ought on no account to do, or must waste the remainder of the day at Brieg, which was my own case. If you stop at Sion, make them give you the shadow of a knight for dinner; and further the deponent sayeth not.

Pray, exert your authority in my behalf at Drury Lane. Your monody upon Sheridan put it into my head to write a monody too, but upon whom? "Sink or swim my dear, that secret shall go to the grave with me!" I shall only tell you, that it is upon a much lamented character, at least much lamented in the newspapers; and as, Miss Somerville is to speak your monody before the play in deep mourning, I beg that mine may be spoken before the Farce, by Mr Munden in pale flesh colour. Hic Sequitur.

MONODY.

For worst abuse of finest parts
Was Mysophill begotten:
More black perhaps there might be hearts,—
But none could be more rotten!

Oh! divine sensibility! Mop up your tears, and then tell me how you like my lines; and those—the idea of which I found in some French poet or other—La Fare—Chaulieu—or some such singy songster.

THE COURSE OF EXCHANGE.

Dick, for one kiss not worth a pin is Forced to give Jane a hundred guineas—
Next week, a better bargain his is;
One guinea for a hundred kisses—
The third for nothing Jenny granted
Richard more kisses than he wanted
The fourth from yawning Dick poor Jane
To buy the lukewarm kiss was fain
To give the guineas back again.

Farewell; when we meet at Florence, I must translate some of Schiller's William Tell for you, it is quite another guess sort of thing from Faust, I can assure you. I only hope, that he meant to borrow Shakspeare; for if he did not mean to borrow, he certainly must have meant to steal.

Adieu! Adieu! Adieu! Remember me!
Aye thou poor ghost!
Ever yours, M. G. LEWIS.

I fell in with the C——s and Mrs G—— at Scori, on their way to Milan, where (I believe) they mean to stay some time.

WASHINGTON'S BIRTH DAY.

Resolved, by the joint committee of both houses of the Legislature of Louisiana, and the committee of the City council of New-Orleans, convened for the purpose of devising the necessary measures in order to celebrate the centennial anniversary of the birth day of WASHINGTON.

ART. 1. That the clergy in the city of New-Orleans, shall be respectfully invited to join in a te deum, in the Cathedral Church of St. Louis, on the 22d inst. at the hour of 11 A. M. to which both houses of the Legislature, the Governor of the State, the City Council of New Orleans, the civil and military authorities of the United States, the civil and military authorities of the State and city, the Clergy, the foreign consuls, the several corporate bodies or associations of the city, the ship and steamboat captains, and the citizens in general, are respectfully requested to attend in a procession which shall be formed at 10 o'clock precisely, at the old convent, under the superintendance of G. W. Morgan, Esq. marshal of the day, and J. H. Holland Esq. deputy marshal.

ART. 2. That the commanding officers of the United States troops in this city, and the commanding officers of the Louisiana legion, are respectfully invited to order a parade of the troops under their command at 10 o'clock A. M. on the public square in front of the church.

ART. 3. That the captains of the ships and steamboats now in this port, are respectfully invited to hoist their flags

ART. 4. That the commanding officers of the artillery, are respectfully invited to have a national salute fired at the break of day, and one hundred guns at 1 o'clock P. M.

ART. 5. That Messrs Caton and Conrad are appointed to deliver an oration in French, and one in English, in the cathedral church, after the te deum.

ART. 6. That the house occupied by the legislature, the principal, and the other public buildings in the city, shall be illuminated in the evening, and that the citizens in general are invited to illuminate their dwellings.

ART. 7. SALES AT AUCTION.

☞ Two columns of auction advertisements are in the first page.

300 Lots of Ground.

Sale of three hundred lots of ground, situate in the Fauxbourg Washington, forming a part of that property which belonged formerly to the estate, and offering in this respect every guarantee as regards the validity of title. Situate in the Fauxbourg Washington, and adjoining the [illegible] of Mr. David Olivier's distillery.

HEWLETT & RASPILLIER.

WILL on Saturday, 25th instant, at 12 o'clock, the above mentioned lots, as per plan executed by Joseph Pilié, Esq. city surveyor, and exhibited at the Exchange coffee-house for the inspection of the public.

TERMS—One, two and three years, for notes bearing mortgage, and satisfactory endorsement required only in the first payment.

The rapid increase of business and of the population, which draws almost daily from the centre of the city, several branches of industry, a fact from which the lots now offered for sale as being of suitable dimensions, already derive an importance. Those facing the Levee offer a most desirable position for the erection of sawmills, for a depot of staves, firewood, &c. and the breaking up of flat-boats. The lots situated in the rear are all very elevated, and one desirous of a pleasant country residence could not select a better site.

The project of establishing at a short distance from the river, between the city and Mr. Montgomery's plantation, a rail-road on a new plan, admitting at all times every description of vehicle, and the projected canal from the city to Lake Borgne, which will pass through these lots, are advantages which will give an increased value to the property, by drawing to this quarter a large proportion of the trade and industry, and thus developing the resources and facilities of a section of our city, bids fair to rank amongst the most flourishing. To those persons of enterprise who have realized such handsome profits in the upper fauxbourg, and who have a confidence in the continued stability of our city, a better opportunity than the present to acquire further benefits, cannot be offered. feb 22
