The northern mail of yesterday brought New York papers of the evening of the 12th of May, Washington and Baltimore of the 19th, and Charleston of the 23d. We are still without any news, either foreign or domestic.

The French ship Fortune and brig Clarisse arrived at New York on the evening of the 14th; and Havre, having left that port on the 7th of April. The dates are to the 7th from Paris. The cholera was spreading dreadfully at Paris. The deaths, up the evening of the 6th, amounted to 1800, and the deaths to 600. The story of poisoning turns out, as was to have been expected, to be completely false!

Mr. C. H. Tibbon, engraver of this city, has issued proposals for publishing a large and full length engraving of the late father ANTONIO DE SEDELLA, from a painting now in the possession of Mr. Bringier, and said to be the best ever taken of him. The high respect of citizens who knew and revered that excellent clergyman, will ensure Mr. T. a large sale of his print. Those who wish to secure copies take it before the plate is worn, will do well to apply soon, as they will be delivered to subscribers as they stand on the lists.

Mr. THEOBOLD proposes to make another attempt to excite a mutiny, from the public square, on Sunday next, at 3 o'clock. We hope he may be more successful than on a former occasion.

By the schooner Two Brothers, captain Harper, arrived at this port yesterday from Tampico, which port she left on the 20th instant, we learn verbally that general Santa Anna, made a retrograde movement from Vallenas, where he was on the 8th, at a distance of only half a league from Tampico, to Altamira, a distance of seven leagues. There had been an arrival from Vera Cruz which reported affairs in that city to have remained in the same position that they were at the date of the previous advices. Provisions were plenty at Tampico and freely admitted. We have seen papers of the 17th, enough our own files were not received. We find nothing worth translating.

The Charleston Courier mentions, from information derived from a passenger in the schr. Ambassador, arrived at that port from St. Johns, [E. F.] that colonel Gadsen has made a treaty with the Seminole Indians, by which they are to remove west of the Mississippi. The whole to remove within three years, or earlier if practicable. A delegation of the chiefs is to go on to examine the country, and to make necessary arrangements. Colonel Gadsden was to proceed to Washington immediately.

The corporation of New York have appointed a committee to inquire into the causes which occasioned the falling of the store of Messrs. Phelps and Peck.

The New York Journal of Commerce has hitherto been the undeviating advocate of the claims of the Indians to jurisdiction over the soil within their reservations; recently, however, it has so far changed its tone as to have recommended the Cherokees to remove from Georgia. The Cherokee Phoenix, a journal printed within the nation and edited by an Indian, in remarking upon the article in the Journal of Commerce, says:

"The advice coming from the source that it does, and having it entitled to great respect, we earnestly recommend it to a candid consideration of our people. When we recommend it to them, we do it with a confident hope, that they will not seek their own selfish interest, but the interest of the whole nation."

The editor closes his remarks as follows.

"We are induced to make these remarks because we have understood that a proposition of a treaty will be sent on to the present chief in a few days from the war department. How far he may be influenced from the advice of our friends abroad, we will not pretend to say; but of one thing we are confident, that nothing on earth will induce him to work against what he believes the good and interest of his country."

Both a morning and an evening journal of this city have repeated, on the authority of the Norfolk Herald, an improbable story of a "tragedy in real life," which is sufficient to stagger the credulity of the most elaborate marvel-mongers. It runneth after this fashion: the wife of a Mr. White, in that neighborhood, had been in the habit of receiving the visits of a Mr. Stone, until the husband, on account of undue familiarities, was induced to cut his acquaintance, and inform him that his absence was preferable to his company. One day, however, while White was absent from home, Stone came armed with a gun, and forced the wife away with him; the husband started in pursuit of his abducted wife, and traced them as far as Norfolk, where he learned that they had left for the Eastern Shore of Maryland in a vessel. Not long after, however, she returned to her lawful spouse, who received her joyfully. About six weeks afterwards the spoiler returned, and the scene was re-enacted: the husband again pursuing as far as Norfolk, and the wife returning again in a few days, in the most woe-begone plight. But Stone was not yet satisfied—he returned again in about a fortnight and succeeded in carrying off, once more, his unwilling victim.—While receiving an intimation that they were to lodge for the night at a certain inn, having obtained a warrant and the aid of a constable went, with a gun, to the reconnoitre. Early in the morning, Stone was seen stealing out of the house, having also a gun with him. Finding himself pursued, he levelled and fired at White, but the shot missing its object, White fired and lodged the contents of his gun in the hip of Stone. The wound has proved mortal, and White has been committed. A story has been got up to wear the semblance of truth—but it is too gross a bumper for belief. White went do for the hero of a tragedy. His horns are too long to be thus distinguished.

We have read the report of Mr. Adams with as much attention as the nature of our pursuits would allow of our bestowing upon a single subject. It is the theme of indiscriminate and fulsome eulogy, on the one hand, and of censure and deprecation on the other. Candid and uninterested readers, however, will look in vain for that "gigantic strength of intellect," which the friends of the bank so much laud, as well as the entire destruction of force and argument, by which the performance is characterised by the opponents of that institution. We extract a number of the leading opinions advanced by Mr. Adams, being all for which, at present, we can find room. He commences by expressing his entire conviction that "the existence of a national bank is indissolubly connected with the continuance of our national union"—and that "with a view to the public interest alone the charter of the present bank ought forthwith to be renewed."

"Under a power to appoint investigating committees, to ascertain by the verdict of a jury whether the charter has been violated or not, a constructive power to inquire into the private affairs, and fortunes, and opinions of houses, and honorable men, because they have been or are the officers of president and directors of the bank of the United States. There is surely no authority given by the bank charter to pry into the secret pecuniary transactions, and to scrutinize the business and circumstances of thousands of individuals entirely foreign to the bank, merely because they have an account with it, which in the examination of the books and proceedings of the corporation, must incidentally be discovered. The subscriber is under a deep and indelible impression that no such power is given to congress by the charter of the bank, nor does he believe that such a power can be exercised, without a flagrant violation of the principles upon which the freedom of this people has been founded."

The language of the editors of newspapers for this insidious exposure, was, in the opinion of the subscriber, to disenfranchise them of their rights as citizens and freemen, if not to assail them in their reputation, their interest, and their credit. Not for the purpose of bringing them to trial by jury, where they might defend themselves, their fortunes, and their characters, in presence of their peers, but to hold them up as accomplices in an conspiracy with the bank. To accomplish two objects by one operation—to defame the bank by exposing charges of corruption, which it would never have an opportunity to repel by a fair trial, according to the laws of the land—and to deter any editor of a newspaper having an account in bank, whose politics might be opposed to a majority of the committee, instigated by the rivalry and hatred of antagonist editors of the newspapers in the same city or neighborhood."

"In reviewing the decision, and the proceedings of the committee subsequent upon it, he deems it his duty to declare, that many of his objections as it have, in his judgment, been removed. He views it as a precedent of portentous evil; as an unjustifiable encroachment of arbitrary authority upon the freedom of the press; as an odious persecution of individual citizens, to prostrate the influence of personal or political adversaries, by the hand of power."

"The president and directors of the bank of the United States are answerable authority only for conformity to the law. To the stockholders they are further accountable for the prudent and discreet employment of their funds. But, while the result of that management has been, for a series of years, to yield to the stockholders half yearly dividends of three and a half per cent. upon their investments, while the stock of the bank is at twenty five per cent. advance upon its original cost in the market, and whilst the keenest of all the complaints against the bank is the extensiveness and universality of its credit, the subscriber believes that the stockholders, and the most vigilant guardians of their interest, may wait until an actual loss shall have happened upon any one loan or discount, before they shall be justified in imputing either thriftless imprudence or sordid corruption to the president and directors of the bank for having granted it."

"It is with great satisfaction that the subscriber declares his entire and unbounding conviction, as the result of the examination which, under the resolution of the house, and the unbounded range of inquiry sanctioned by the majority of the committee, he was able to give the books and proceedings of the bank, that no misconduct whatever is imputable to the president or to any of the present directors of the bank. That, in the management of the affairs of that immense institution, now for a series of nearly ten years, occasional errors of judgment, and possibly of inadvertence, have been committed, is doubtless true—in the vast multitude of relations of the bank with the property of the whole community, the board of directors of the parent bank, or some of its branches, have sometimes mistaken the law, and sometimes have suffered by misplaced confidence. A spirit of pre-determined hostility, uncontrolled by a liberal sense of justice, prying for flaws, and hunting for exceptions, may greatly swell, and swell with exultation at its own sagacity, in discovering an error, or arguing a misconstruction of powers. In the conduct of the present president and directors of the bank of the United States, no intentional wrong and no important or voluntary error has been committed.—He deems this declaration due from him to those worthy and respectable citizens, in the face of this house, and the nation, willing as he is to abide upon it the decision peremptorily required of him as a signal vindication of the honor and integrity of injured and persecuted men. It has been impossible for him to observe, without deep concern, the spirit and temper with which this investigation has been prosecuted, particularly with regard to the president of the bank."

"I was indeed the unfortunate condition of those to whom the management of the affairs of the corporation were entrusted, that, whatever they have done, must be made a subject of censure. If they increase their business and profits by branch drafts upon the bank, it is a heinous offence, because congress had neglected to give a power to sign the bank bills to any other officers than the president and cashier. If they increase the value of their real estate, by contributing to a turnpike road, it is wasting the property of the stockholders in gratuities and donations. If they enlarge their discounts and accommodations, they supply temptations to over-trading, and bring the bank to the verge of ruin. If they contract their issues, they produce embarrassment in the trading community. Do they trade in foreign silver and domestic gold coins? They are accessary to the pernicious exportation of the precious metals. Do they substitute bills of exchange for silver dollars in the exportation to China? Who does not see that they must send to London the coin which formerly went round the Cape of Good Hope? And, besides, the transaction looks very like respondentia securities. The most perfect parallel to the majority report known to the subscriber, is the lively lady in "Much Ado about Nothing:"

"Who never yet saw man,
"How wise, how noble, young, how rarely feature'd
"But she would spell him backward."

"Among the objects of investigation author ised by a majority of the committee, transcending, in the opinion of the subscriber, the powers delegated to them by the resolution of the house, and therefore unwarranted and improper, were six sets of interrogatories, amounting in all to one hundred and sixty-one questions, addressed by one member of the committee to the president of the bank, never submitted to the committee for their consideration, but drawn up, a large portion of them, after the committee had closed their examination at Philadelphia, and after the subscriber had returned to Washington, and resumed his seat in the house.—They reminded him of certain popular works on instruction of children, in which universal or particular histories, or abstruse and profound sciences are taught by question and answer. The subscriber has found many of them, upon perusal, passing the powers of comprehension; but they appear to comprise a compendium of political economy, and the skeleton of a profound discertation upon coins, currency, paper credit, circulation and banking. The subscriber cannot withhold his admiration from the comprehensive views and profound knowledge of the subject discovered in those inquiries, and believes that satisfactory answers to them might form a very useful second, though somewhat larger volume, to the legislative and documentary history of the bank of the United States, compiled by the indefatigable research and industry of the clerk of the house of representatives, and his associate. But a large portion of the questions might, with more propriety, be addressed in a circular to the presidents of all the banks in the four quarters of the globe, than to the president of the bank of the United States. And it may be doubted whether of many of the inquiries, a convention of all the bankers in the world would not be reduced to the necessity of leaving them as they found them—to be solved only by the ingenuity and sagacity of their authors.

"The complaints made against the president of the bank at Portsmouth, New Hampshire, in the summer of 1829, and the correspondence between the board at Philadelphia, and the late secretaries of the treasury and of war, form a portion of the documents relating to the books and proceedings of the bank, called for by the committee, and communicated to them. They are not noticed in the report of the chairman, but in the opinion of the subscriber, are more deserving of the attention of congress, and of the nation, than any other part of the papers commented upon in the report. An effort very thinly veiled on the part of two of the executive departments of the general government to exercise a control, political and pecuniary, over the proceedings of the bank and its branches, a control highly exceptionable in principle, and even contrary to law, appears to him to be fully disclosed in those papers. He will not permit himself to inquire into the motives of the agents in those transactions. It is sufficient for the public interest that the projected encroachments of power were disconcerted and laid aside."

WASHINGTON, May 19.

We hear it reported, and we believe the report, that the senate of the United States, on Thursday last, rejected the two nominations which have been made of judges for the territory of Florida, to supply the places of judges Brackenridge and Smith, whose commissions have been suffered to expire. These nominations are said to have been for some time depending. Intelligencer.

WASHINGTON, May 19.

In the senate, yesterday, M. King, from the committee on public lands, to which was referred the bill reported by the committee on manufactures, to appropriate for a limited time, the proceeds of the public lands, made a voluminous report; which was read. It condemns the bill reported by the committee on manufactures, and exhibits a great variety of alleged errors of reasoning and of calculation in the report of that committee; and recommends a reduction of prices, and acceleration of sales. The conclusion of the report recommends that the bill reported by the committee on manufactures be amended so as to reduce the price of the public lands to a minimum of one dollar per acre, and of fifty cents per acre on such lands as have been in the market above five years, and to strike out the whole of the present bill, except the clause which allows 10 per cent. to the new states, and to increase that to 15 per cent. On motion of Mr. Robinson, 5000 copies of the report were ordered to be printed. Mr. Hendricks, from the committee on roads and canals, reported a bill for the improvement of the Tennessee river, without amendment.

The message from the house of representatives, stating that the house had disagreed to the amendment on the apportionment bill, was, on motion of Mr. Webster, laid on the table, to be taken up at the next meeting of the senate.

In the house of representatives, Mr. Bates of Massachusetts and Mr. White, of Louisiana, excused by a vote of the house on Tuesday.

Mr. Wickliffe, from the select committee to whom was referred the report of the secretary of the treasury on the subject, reported a bill to provide for the better security of the lives of passengers on board of vessels propelled in whole or in part by steam. [This bill proposes that after a certain date every steamboat navigating the waters of the United States, shall be required to take out a license, upon condition recited in the act. It proposes also the appointment of inspectors of steamboats and boilers at certain ports, &c.] On this bill, and Mr. Wickliffe's report accompanying it, 6000 copies were ordered to be printed; Mr. W. remarking that though it was possible the bill might not be acted upon the present session, it was desirable that the information contained in the report and bill should go to the public, that the expediency of the proposed legislation should be well considered.

Mr. Wickliffe from the committee on public lands, reported a bill to authorise the sale of certain public lands in the state of Ohio." [This bill attaches to the land districts in Ohio all the Indian reservations which have been recently ceded to the United States by the Indians. The bill was twice read and ordered to be engrossed for a third reading this day.

THE subscriber has the honor of announcing to the public, that on Sunday the 27th instant, he will open his establishment, situated at Port Pontchartrain, near the termination of the rail road, on the Lake. He will neglect nothing that may tend to render his establishment agreeable to those who may honor him with their company. They will find a bar well supplied with the best liquors that can be procured in this city; a billiard room; a restaurant, where all the productions of the market, together with the best pastry, will be provided, and particular attention will be paid to the gratification of the palate of the lovers of fresh fish.

There are also private rooms for private parties whenever they are desired.

Carriages may also be found at all hours of the day, plying between the rail road and bayou St. John.

SEIDLITZ POWDERS.—The virtues of this celebrated preparation, when carefully and faithfully made, are well known; so well as to have created an unprecedented and increasing demand for it, ever since its discovery. The consequence of this immense demand has been (of late particularly) a hasty carelessness in its composition; which, if continued, must destroy its reputation as rapidly as it has been made.

Most of the Seidlitz Powders, manufactured at the north, fail (when used here) to produce their salutary effects; and are returned, with complaints, to the seller.

The subscriber has therefore been compelled to use the only means in his power to remedy the evil; and will, in future, carefully prepare them himself. He will warrant his preparation to be equal to any imported from Europe, or any part of the world; to be always fresh and efficacious, and will keep on hand a sufficient quantity to supply the city of New Orleans and its vicinity. JAMES S. SHAW, may 27 Corner of Royal and Conti-house sts.
