THE DAILY BEE. SATURDAY MORNING, MARCE %

A friend whose intelligence on many popular commands our respect, takes exception to the strictures we indeliged to a few dayse ago on Spiritualism, and capecially to ear some cution of its tenets and tendencies based upon the disclosures of Dr. Rarcz. The anterity of that individual is strongly inspeached, and he is pronounced a mean, mercenary and debased creature—Mrs. Harczie. on Spiritualism, and expectally to ear densus custion of its tenets and tendencies based upon the disclosures of Dr. Harcz. The analyse peaked, and he is pronounced a mean, merchanty of that judividual is strongly impeached, and he is pronounced a mean, merchanty and debased creature—Hig. Harcz: a fidavit against him being cited in proof of the Doctor's multifarious university of the decearation of his wife, who is seek; just the decearation of his wife, who is seek; just the decearation of his wife, who is seek; just a virtue of the republic of the control of the promote of the virtue of the virt is the celebrated Mr. MARSFIELD'S as lean breast of some of the cunning artifices with the world beyond the grave. There is by, Randolph, who, after years of experience as a trance medium, abjures and repudiates Spiritualism as highly injurious to sound morality and religion, and as extremely mischievous in its consequences. There is Mr. Cours, who, though still a believer, honestly declares that three fourths of the mediums are either impostors or habitucinated. There is Judge Eosonse himself, the great champion of Spiritualism, who as knowledges the almost total impossibility of discriminating between real and fictitious spiritual communications. In short, from all quarters, and on all sides, the presentions of this most egregious and mischievous of isme are impogued. a trance medium, abjures and repudiate

We do not wish to be understood as totally lenying the possibility of spiritual manifests 1008—but we believe it is notitier wise nor ate to seek them. There is no assurance honest faith in Goo will in all likelihood be perwarded, or transmogrified into a nort of Pantheism not far removed from Atheism; while his plain, common sense view of obedience to the decalogue as the rule-of life, will be in danger of modification from the sensant teachings of passional attraction and free love. We take it that if Spiritualism is entitled to the smallest inking of regard, it is because of the truth that is in it. Now whatever of truth may by possibility exist in the revolutions of Spiritualism, may be found much more fully and much clearer in an olduch more fully and much clearer in an oldmed work termed "The Bible"-a voland entirely below the sublimated aspira-tions of most modern Spiritunists. Any hing that Spiritualiam inculcates which is ther not embraced within the Scripture is at variance with the teachings of Hol sober, rational and Gos fearing people. In fine, strong and bealthy minds require no supermatural solicitings to give them faith; weak and morbid ones will be deluded and superisations as sortenage week and movined by them.

To our mind this same Spiritualism, which for some years has bewildered and puzzled a large proportion of the population of the Union, is one among these mushroom excrescences—moral fungi—the spawn of ignorance, superstition and credelity—which are constantly prevailing at the North, and are almost entirely confined to that region. It is of the bastard brood of firms, such as Communiam, Abultionism, Bisomerism, Agrarianism, and the like, which perpetually affind the Northern mind. There is a processes to extreme a professity to familian and extravagant ideas on most subjects, which, cupied with astonishing native shrewdness, constitutes the somewhat paradoxical staple of the Northern character.
