Since my last, intelligence has been received, concerning the news of the capture of Santa Anna, and his army, by Gen. Houston. The gloom has been again dispelled, and joy once more animates every bosom at this singular and almost bloodless victory obtained by Gen Houston. A discussion of considerable spirit and animation again arose vesterday in the Senate on this subject—memorals and resolutions are almost daily pouring into the two houses from different parts of the nation, praying for and recommending the recognition of the independence of Texas—Whatever may be the disposition of Congress to take his step, I am inclined to think that it will not be done, till things are more stable and settled in that country. I have no doubt many volunters will flock from this country to the Texian standard and considerable pacumiary aid will be afforded, in the way of loans and contribution? but the government of this country will not recognize its independence for some itms. The victory of Gen Houston will give great eclai to the Texian cause, and rally round it a force that will be irresistible and insure success and stability to tag overnment. That and the war in Florida and Alabama seem to engross the whole of the public attention here at present. They form the subjects of conversation in every coteric and circle as one of those sources of excitement which occasionally occur to agitate the tranquil current of ordinary life. When Gen. Jesch took leave of Gen. Jackson, prior to his departure for Alabama, it is reported that he said, "Farewell Gen. Jackson. I may not see you again," "nor do I was it replied the Fresident wifesses you do better than Gen. Jackson. MR. PINCKNEY:S REPORT.

This interesting document has been published in Washington, and may be daily expected in our city, it yields socking, it sustains Southern rights, and that is a mode assistance by the confederacy. The petitions are rejected—the sovereignty of the states preserved-gand a watern arcicity of interfering with the authority of radding the Report itself, and each will be upper the best of a few days longer, when they will have an opportunity of reading the Report itself, and each will then independently form his own pointon, regardless of the dictum of any individual. would be desily affected by any such interference.

A volation of faith, to all the slaveholding States, who consented to the concession, and its acceptance by Congress, for purposes of national good to the Union, and not of injury to themselves, and who would necessarily be injured by any legislation in the District, which would produce insurrection and service war in Maryland and Virginis, and exactly in proportion to their proximity to those States.

A violation of faith to the people of the District, who concented to be transferred to the Federal Government, elying on its bonor and justice for the same paternal care and kindness, which they would have reserved from the States to which they/originally belonged, and whose rights, moreover, as American situens, are solemnly guaranteed by the Federal Constitution, and cannot be interfered with without an infraction of the most sacred principles of republican government, and a violation of the faith reposed in Congress by all the States, insumuch as no State can be injured by any property of the states, are the injured by any property of the States.

This part of the Report occupies about 20 pages, and is full of details and illustrations to sustain these points

The Report site aboves that it would be "unwise, impolitic, and dangerous to the Union," even if it did not involve a volution of the public faith. Upon these points it takes the following grounds, with several others "too tedious to mention," viz:

That the Government was formed for the great purpose of common defence and general welfare.

That Congress is bound to do no act which may conflict with the very purposes fer which may conflict with the very purposes fer which may conflict with the very purposes fer which the Government itself was formed.

That, if slavery was abolished in the District, so far from grounding "sommon defence" dec. it might require the expenditure of millions to arrest the evils that would follow such a measure—

That it would be an end of the principle in the lightning, over all the surrounding country.

That this would be a poor reward to the parriotic States of Maryland and Virginia, by whom the District was eighed without compensation.

That they sould be a poor reward to the parriotic States of Maryland and Virginia, by whom the District was eighed without compensation.

That they sould be a poor reward to the parriotic States of Maryland and Virginia, by whom the District was eighed without compensation.

That the either of the District can abelieh Slevery if they choose, there being no act to hinder them, and the laws of Virginia and Maryland, which are their local laws, allowing smancipation.

That she either of the District have not asked any in-local laws, allowing emancipation.

That the eitisens of the District have not asked any interference in this matter.

That to interfere against their consent would be an outrage and oppression which so rational man could justify.

That it would create insurrestions, &c. in the Slaveholding States.

The New York Journal of Commerce announces the arrival in that city of $300,000 of the indemnity money in gold and adds:

The gold however has nothing to do with the sone any market, for as we understand, it is all to be taken to the mint and coined into American pieces, in the hope of making the good policy of the Administration to operate according to its intention, and actually make gold a part of the circulating medium—We think, however, the indications are plain, that this can not otherwise be effected, than by carrying the suppression of bank notes much farther. The people prefer paper to coin in their pockets, and they can only be compelled the carry the latter by being deprived to the former."

A very sensible writer in the Unstel Service Journal, a British Magazine, deveted to the interests of the Army and Navy of England, s-eaks in the highest terms of the American rifle withs a bodier at New-Orleans when the British ware defeated there by General Jackson. He gives the preferench to the American rifle, on account of the rapidity with which it can be loaded and fired,—and the tremendeus execution which it can do in a close contest, such as an attack sporra breastwork; believing that it can serve at once, if the sides of the beyonet were sharpened, both the purposes of a gun and sweed. The sharpuses of the edges would prevent an enemy from grasping and warding the bayonet from his body, when attacked in eloce after y, while the side could be disc harged at a third person. The writer believes that a soldier thus armed, would be a match for four, less effectively accounted,—and strongly treesmmends the immediate adoption of the weapon in the British army—Fisks.

The Rail Road of Le Loire, of fifty-two English miles in length, is completed, and has cost £300,000. A loan of £140,000, is about to be raised, bearing interest at five per cent, with surplus divid nds; and as the revenue cannot be less the first year than £12,000, and at the complet on of the canals in about eightness months, (which will afford a constant and regular communication with Paris and the north of France.) It will be at least £30,000, this promises to be one of the most profitable rail road speculations of the day. The instillments on the loan are payable at Mosers. Giyas.
