THE NEXT CONGRESS.

The result of the election for Congressmen has been but slight of it in the greater interest of the Presidential canvass. These elections, however, are important, inasmuch as they have decided the political aspect of the next Congress against the Republicans. In fifteen Southern States that have already elected, they have lost three members. In the Northern States yet to elect they can scarcely make any gains. Giving to the States yet to elect the same political distributions as in the present Congress, the House of Representatives will stand as follows:

	Dem.	Rep.
Total	130	101
Opposition majority in the House	29

THE SENATE.

	Dem.	Rep.
Total number of Senators	66
Already elected	37	9
To be elected—Republicans	5
Opposition	7
Opposition majority	2

It is very evident, then, that in the next Congress the Black Republican party will be in a minority—not alone in the Senate, but in the House of Representatives. Consequently, even supposing that the anti-Southern members were wicked and ridiculous enough to attempt to pass a bill through either branch inquiring the rights or assailing the institutions of the people of the South, the effort would be utterly fruitless. There is, in fact, no possibility whatever of the slightest aggression by Congress on the South, unless, as Senator Douglas says, "a portion of the Southern Senators and Representatives absent themselves, so as to give an Abolition majority in the House, and a majority in the Senate." We have no doubt whatever, from the well-known capacity and importunities of the proprietors, that they will be prepared at all times to furnish servery and convenient supper vending of the taste of the most fastidious epicure. Orders will be received for dinners, lunches, suppers, &c.

EXTREMELY TOO CHEAP.

It must be evident to all who will permit themselves to calmly reflect on the subject, that should the South precipitately withdraw from the Union, abandoning to the enemy all the avails of the national copartnership, the step will be construed as a tacit confession of inferiority—inability to sustain their boasted principles. For the same reason that the secession of a Northern State would be the confession of a Black Republican majority in all the arms, ammunition and cheese, would demonstrate the senseless inability of the besieged to cope successfully with their assailants. The South, whether in or out of the Union, will be under the same obligation as the other nations to assert the public debt. To ignore this liability would be to lower the esteem of republicanism and this probity which is most inestimably endowed, into mental degradation. It is certainly impossible with that dignity which a patriot possesses of being in the right should sustain, even by violent means, should pusillanimous cause prove inadequate, to surrender to an implacable foe its means of extinguishing pecuniary obligations from which it cannot honorably escape. There is no country whatever of taking a step so inconsistent with its own position of the South. We are utterly incompetent to cope successfully with the North and the West "fill" have not definitively and satisfactorily arranged, or that feeling is impracticable to keep the Gordian knot, the South will boldly cut it. We have no idea whatever that the agitation now prevailing will subside without leaving a trace, and without effecting a material change in our relations to the Northern section of the Confederacy. Our wishes, and of course of a peaceful character, extend to a final which is profoundly disastrous to the best interests of all who are engaged in it; but it can be managed only upon such a basis as will secure hereafter to the South the constitutional enjoyment of all her privileges. Any paste-work in the shape of temporary concession or compromise would be idle and fruitless. Mentally, therefore, we think the Carolina and Georgia have not yet decided, they should not voluntarily forfeit their right of representation in Congress, especially as by so doing they depict their sisters of the South to possible wrong and detriment.

AN INSANE ASYLUM.

The report of Dr. Delery to the City Council in reference to the necessity of an Insane Asylum in New Orleans is too important a document to be allowed to remain unnoticed. The Council had requested Dr. D. to furnish a plan for such an institution, and this is embodied in the report. One special reason why New Orleans needs an asylum for the insane is that in our city is to be found unconstitutional more than one-thousandth of profound learning, extensive experience and keen sagacity by which alone can be terrible malady be successfully combated. In considering the subject Dr. Delery confines himself for the present to three points, viz: The things which are necessary for an insane asylum; the grounds necessary for the buildings, and the plan of construction—presenting a subsequent report to refer to the moral, intellectual and religious treatment of the insane.

With respect to the locality of the proposed asylum, Dr. Delery proves that Nicholls be situated at high ground, some small distance from the city, where land may be readily obtained, and where space for gardens and other sources of recreation can be commanded. Consequently he gives the preference to the Hospitality or Greenlaw Ridge. The grounds should be sufficiently extensive to permit the erection of the principal buildings, with two wings; the necessary outbuildings, large yards and a vegetable garden. These objects can be best accomplished by the purchase of a tract of land of about five acres front by ten in depth. The edifice itself should consist of a basement and a single upper story, which will render it more easy to be kept clean, as well as facilitate the care of the sick.

Dr. Delery enters into various details respecting the different rooms, their arrangement, conveniences for light, cleanliness, &c., into which it is not necessary to follow him, particularly as he is of opinion that the services of an experienced architect would become requisite at every step in the construction of the asylum. The report concludes with the following resolutions, which address themselves directly to our city authorities:

Resolved, In case of there diseases which require more than ordinary force, care, close, or pressure; in consequence of the violence of the patient, and which has been found to be of the most difficult cases. It is indeed worthy of the enlightened and responsible of those who, the promulgers, are the guardians of the head of the afflicted or a great and flattering city.

For several years past the city of New Orleans has been engaged in a certain profession of a most which is really astonishing. The progress of light is being extended in every direction, and our beautiful streets are being paved with durable materials, which combine utility and pleasure; beautiful edifices are being erected; everywhere the march of improvement can be traced, all which, combined with a wise, liberal and enlightened progressive administration. The gentlemen, from contemplating this mass of grandeur, prosperity and opulence, can not but feel proud that they are upon the same bench as our city. Their confidence is most honorable, and well worthy of your city. Behold them as representatives, legislators, judges, jurors, citizens and men, occupying influential, honorable and responsible positions, and they are the thinkers of learning and science, profession, brought on by loss of fortune, domestic troubles, the death of a beloved wife or child, or affliction terminated; these are frequently the causes of a sudden loss of reason, which, however, can be restored by the humanity and philanthropy of those who have the fortunate privilege to will good for it to exist.

THEATRES.—A Great Success.—The debut of Miss Rosenbaum in Fontenoy, on Monday last, was one of the greatest triumphs we ever remember to have witnessed in New Orleans. The cast of the opera is admirable, embracing the full strength of the operatic company, and the rendering of the play on Monday heightened the most unbounded applause. It is to be repeated to-night with the same performers, and a very crowded house may be anticipated.

LOUISIANA.—The returns, official and reported, from thirty-eight parishes give Breckinridge 234 majority. The remaining parishes are mostly Democratic, and will probably increase the majority to about 300.

BUSINESS RESUSCITATED.—It will be perceived by our advertising columns that H. Logan & Co. have opened a first-class restaurant at No. 61 Commercial place, on the popular establishment known as the "Old Stockton." We have no doubt whatever, from the well-known capacity and requirements of the proprietors, that they will be prepared at all times to furnish servery and convenient supper vending of the taste of the most fastidious epicure. Orders will be received for dinners, lunches, suppers, &c.

NEW ORLEANS SCHOOL OF MEDICINE.—The Introductory to the regular course of lectures in this institution will be delivered by Professor A. Dussieux, at the College, opposite the Charity Hospital, at 12 o'clock to-day, (Thursday) November 15th. The medical profession and the public generally are respectfully invited to attend.
