On the heavy blow on Wednesday afternoon the schr: (news boat) Journal of Commerce, and pilot boat Wm. Bayard, in attempting to get under way from their ancorages inside the Hook. ran foul of each other, and drifted ashore; there being a heavy sea at the time, the bowsprit and cutwater of the former were carried away, by coining in countact with the quarter of the latter. which also received considerable damage; fortunately it was low water at the time, and the wind abating soon after, both vessels were got off during the succeeding flood tide, without any other injury than stated above.

MISSING VESSEL, -The schr. Bradford John Lindsey, master, sailed from Thomaston, Aug, 12, for Richmond, with a cargo of lime. She was 18 months old, high deck and copper fustened. As she has not been heard from since she left the port, fears are entertained that she was lost in the gale of the 17th or 25th August. Any information respecting the vessel or crew will be gratefully received by the friends of those on board, by letters addresed to I. Kimball, Thomaston Me.

NEW-YORK, October 21.

A Convention of literary and scientific gentlemen, invited by the Trustees of the proposed New University, to confer on the general interests of letters and liberal education, assembled yesterday morning at the Common Council room of the City Hall. About one hundred gentlement were present from various parts of the United-States. The meeting was organized by the election of the Rev. Dr. Betts, and the Hon. Albert Gallatin, vice-presidents, and Mr. Delafield, secretary. Prayers were read by the Rev. Dr. Wainwright, and the general objects of the meeting were stated by the Rev. Doctor

In the afternoon, there was a discussion as to the best method of appointing Professors. The Convention adjourned at 10 o'clock this morning, when it is understood there will be uddresses on the subject of the management of

FAMILY OF ORLEADS. + The present king of France is descended from two of the most distinguished individuals of the seventeenth century, Henry of Navarre and Mary de Medicis. From the "Tribune of the Departments." Central Committee of the Friends of the People. A considerable number of those distinguished citizens who all took an active part in the late revolution, being justly alarmed at beholding about fifty Deputies assembled in secret committee, without a President, and without regularly nominated Secretaries, arrogating to themselves authority and rights which it belonged not to them to exercise, have deemed it requisite to assemble in order to provide the means requisite for preserving the liberty of the people from the new dangers which seem to threaten it.

They were all of opinion that those among the citizens who should even have most contributed towards the overthrow of Charles the 10th. could in no manner impose on the nution any form of government whatsoever; this power they recognized to be vested in the nation alone, and the most decided Republicans were ready to accept a new dynasty if the majority of the citizens should unite in proclaiming it. But they exacted a similar resignation on the part of those who were of an other opinion, and were desirous that at all events, those principles which had stimulated the people, and for which they had foughtand conquered, should be proclaimed by the provisional authorities.

The lash of the committee was rendered the more easy, inasmuch as it had in a manner been anticipated by those citizens, who by their own courage, as well as by the wishes of the inhabitants of Paris, had been summoned to take the direction of affairs. The following address was therefore immediately drawn up and carried to the Hotel de Ville, by a deputation of forty partial son such men as these that and amors are to be conferred.

Where were your projectes friends.

'The nation alone has conquered, to her the fruits of the victory should revert.

'A free Constitution, voted by the citizens, and which shall secure the national rights and interests; such has been the object of our efforts. such should be our reward.

'Already has the central commission evinced a wish to proclaim the following principles, on graved on the heart of every citizen:

Hereditary privileges shall exist no longer:

there shall be no longer a State religion; the direct or indirect vote of every French citizen in the choice of Representatives: the establishment and preservation of the National Guard. ment and preservation of the National Guard, as they shall have a voice in the councils of the with the nomination of its deputies by the councils, the public voice will never be heard for tireness the entire liberty of the councils. tizens: the entire liberty of the press; the applicatidgest and. Gen'l Lafayette and the Prefect of the Departnent, received this deputation in one of the halls of the Hotel. The president of the deputation, after having read the addres given above, developed with energy in a speech of some length the real sentiments and wishes of the nation. From thence they proceeded to the municipal commis-

. Gen'l Lafayette and M. Odillon Barrot, who spoke in the name of the commission, replied, hat the principles announced in the address were in unison with their's, and that neither Gen. Lafayette nor the members of the municipal committee would divest themselves of the power voluntarily confided to them by the people, until all the interests and rights of the nution should be secured by a constitution, freely digested and voted, and in unison with all their wishes.

Innumbrable were the evidences given of dis satisfaction with the proceedings of the selfconstituted government. The new King, to whose good intentions and kindly feelings all were and are united in rendering justice, necessarily shared some of the consure heaped so unsparingly on his headstrong and self interested friends. His reception of the brown from those who had received no commission to bestow it, and his pompons instalment in office by the two chambers, was received by the daily press with such observations as the following, pasted on the walls, (as is now the custom with all the journals of the day) through all the most public streets and frequented promenades of the

The aim of the revolution of 1830 is not yet attained.

A revolution is always a revolution-A wast opulation shall not have taken arms, a throng ave been overturned, a whole royal family have been ignominiously driven off, and seven thouevents, than incre pathetic recitals; saddening recollections, and pious monuments. Those who fought side by side with the brave men who have descended to the tomb, cannot forget that their first, their greatest duty, is unceasingly to watch over the preservation of the general welfare of there country. Domestic interests must be silent until liberty shall be fully obtrined, until the blood which yet stains our trave ments shall have brought forth its fruits.

Either we are grately deceived, or the here opulation of Paris is not so easily blinded as at s supposed. An immortal name, the greatest in rance, that of Lafayette, had suddenly calmed their effervescent enthusiasm, confidence pene rated every bosom; they accepted from the hands of this great man a constitutional king, who thus became for all or at least for the majority. the lifting pledge of a happy and peaceful futu-

Dear Six:—Allow me by introduce to you the heaver of this letter Professor Tranchin of our Academy. Professor Tronchin visits Philadelphia with a view of making an engagement in that city as teacher of the English, French Beili deco. J B Hyde, J. K Boyd, Mrs. Frost, and Spanish languages, as the patronage here in Lee, Walton de co. C Oakley & co. B Levy, those studies is found hardly sufficient to give lam a stětříche Salary. 🔑 Previous to our inviting Mr. Troughin to this Academy, I conversed with Professor Value and Professor Pay, of New York, on the subject of his qualifications to teach the modern languages -- Professor Value assured me that he was bet- [board, or to ter qualified to teach the French language than any other instructor he was acquainted with in New York; and Professor Fay gave me un account oute as satisfactory of his ability to teach the Spanish language. Besides these recommendations, Mr. Tronchia produced, to our Board of Trustees, the most satisfactory testimonials from other competant judges, of his al ibity to teach the languages he professes, I mention hese facts to give you a knowledge of the testinony we had of Mr. Troughin's qualifications sefore we invited him to, one institution; and I can cheerfully add, that the success of those pupils of our semmary who have been under his instruction, has entirely justified the high opinion of those who knew him best in 'New York. I reget very sauch to part with him from our he thrifton but from the canse I have mentioned it is likely he may embrace some other situation. His manners as you will perceive, are those of a geotlem in, and digarfied; and I feel much esteem for his character every way.
