their soffrages without individual bias or political distinction, to those whose experience, capacity, up-rightness, and private character mark them as best fitted for the fulliment of the functions assigned to the places they solicit. The framers of the Constitution, in making so much of the judiciary elective, undoubtedly had in view the propriety and expediency of reposing entire confidence in the body of the people. They believed that the citizens of a Republican Government might be properly clothed with the momentous power, and that little apprehension could raise to fits above, manuach as their intelligence. exist of its abuse, maxmich as their intelligence descrimination and judgment would be a sufficient guarantee for its impartial exercise. As these were the motives which acquated the Convention in enarging the objects of popular franchise, it becomes the electors to justify and vindicate the wisdom or this decision by demonstrating their entire engability of choosing project officers, without respect for other of choosing proper oneers, without respect to other considerations than the personal worth, talent and constworthiness of the several competitors.

We think that the cutzens of New Orleans have dready given strong evidence of their desire to be added to a fuguration to the constant of nided by views smilar to those expressed, in the pontaneous movement by which political opinion ave been utterly discarded from the canvass. The assistion in respect to any candidate, is no longer whether he be a Whig or a Democrat. This is a great antage ground achieved, for of all circums exiculated to restrict and impair a full, free and frank manifestation of the public will, we conceive there can be none more baneful than the stringent exac-tions of party despotism—by which, in a contest inolving no political principle whatever, the elector equired to cast his vote with exclusive reference ie politics and not the ment of the candidate. The copie have not failed to discern this, and have con-quently made other and sounder issues. They have still, however, something more to ac-ounlish. Having reputated fallacious tests, the acm adopt genuine ones. Let them repair to the solls with the mymcible determination to sustain the titlest among the candidates—let them bestow their otes upon the honest, the capable, the experienced some who have already been tried and not been four wanting, or in default of such, on those whose pas-nonorable career furnishes ample security for the fu-ure. We bespeak special attention to the choice of instices of the Peace and Clerks. House adjourned.

In the SENATE on the 4th, Mr. Cass offered a Senate whether any officer of the Army has, during the past of present year, used any calls upon any of the States for milita or volunteers, and if so what intuber of troops have been called for, and the expense incurred thereby; and also whether such calls have been contermanded by the War Department. In answer to an inquiry, Mr. Cass said that his resolution had reference to the calls made by General States, and he had a statement of those calls, from which it would appear that Gen G had called in various ways for upwards of $1,900,000, and had also made numerous appointments of staff officers and others, for all which he had no authority whatever.

Fresh Orders from the War Department

A new batch of instructions has been sent out from the War Department to the Governors of Louisiana, Alabama and other States. The following is the nort important of these orders: most important of these orders.

"General Taylor has been instructed to organize out of the three or six months" volunteers which snay have been sent to him from your State, such as may have been sent to him from your State, such as may be willing to engage, under the act of the 18th ult., to serve for twelve months unless somer discharged, and to dispense with and send home such as are unwilling to change their terms of service."

We will make but one remark in regard to this great have of fellowed the send that the send of the fresh piece of folley on the part of the immortal Marcy. The volunteers from Louisiana were entoted into service with the precise understanding that they were to serve six months, or less. If they are now compellto zerve six months, or less. If they are now compelled to serve twelve months, or be disbanded and reshipped, it will be a gross violation of the faith of the Government pledged to these gallant men through their constituted authorities. It does seem as though, now that the war has fairly began, the individual who presides over the Department, at Washington, is striving to ascertain to what extent he can interfere with its vigorous proceeding, by embarrassing instructions and contradictory orders.
