JOBS PLENTY; NO SEEKERS

"THE NEW YORKER," who was recently in this city, said to me that a vast amount of work for office help is available. He pointed out that there are many opportunities in the various fields of business, and that it is not difficult to find positions. He recom-manded that one should apply directly to the establishments where the work is wanted, and not through employment agencies or newspapers. He also said that one should be willing to work for a fair salary and not to make unreasonable demands.
