A BROKEN GLASS-

The window of the New York building, with its large glass panes, was broken by a heavy fall from the roof. The window had been left open, and the wind had blown the glass out. The broken panes scattered debris all over the floor, and several people were injured. The cause of the fall is still unknown.

A SAFETY VALVE-

A safety valve on a steam boiler failed, causing a massive explosion and a fire. The valve was designed to release excess pressure in case of overheating, but it had not been properly maintained and was not functioning properly.

EXODUS OF SQUIRRELS-

A large group of squirrels was seen moving southward, following the food supply. The squirrels were seen carrying nuts and seeds, and some were even seen carrying small branches. The exodus was likely due to the changing seasons and the need for food.
