

Hi, I'm Buell Duncan. I want to welcome you to the new IBM Software Forum. This is a virtual event platform that gives us the ability to bring the latest in content and event information and Webcasts as we share the power of IBM's software business with our clients, our Business Partners and with IBMers.

You know, it's IBM software more than any other business in the world, brings the capabilities to address these needs around information, process and people. We have a unique set of capabilities that taken together no other company or competitor can match.

I know you're going to find the strength of the IBM software portfolio that's built around the robustness and the scalability that combines with the openness allowing for integration and combining and transforming business processes, and our capabilities around collaboration that no other company can touch.

You know, once a Business Partner told me that taken individually each of our businesses has very difficult competitors. But no company competes with IBM and with IBM software. I hope you'll use this forum as an opportunity to build your skills and to learn more about what value we bring to help our client succeed in this very exciting marketplace.