A NEWLY invented article called an insect pent or box (Patented) for the protection of the person against the mosquitoes, &c. &c. at Charles street opposite the Exchange Hotel, of such an elegant and novel form as not to obtrude its light portable and comfortable qualities, and at most reasonable approbations.

As a perfect protection against annoyance from all insects, with no exception to the circumference in which it is used, and as a perfect preventive against the bite of the most fatal to persons subject to the influence of their poison, such as the musquito, &c. &c. the using of it becomes absolutely necessary, before subjecting the person to the attacks of those insects, and may be carried in the pocket, or other part of the clothing, and is so small as to be easily folded up and put away in a small compass, and is not larger than an umbrella, and is simple in their use and becomes much out of the way as to require little or no attention, and is of such a form as to be easily unfolded and put into use. The cause required to form the tent or to fold it up out of the way will not require more than a minute. It will be at all times ready for use instead of an unsightly mosquito curtain, and in as simple in construction that it can at get out of order. It is unobtrusive and lasting, not heating, cooling, cleanly, and sleeping under, and to be used in travelling, boating between and harbors, and may be used by travellers, sports-men, and in short by almost every one who is annoyed or subject to the influence of insects, and by people who never know the comforts that may be had in any degree of it this warm mosquito country until they try one of these novelties called an INSECT PENT. They can be carried in the pocket, or other part of the clothing and in a small compass, and when required for use can be unfolded and put into use in a minute or two. Those who wish an extra good article to sleep and rest in, should have one of these, as they are made of the most useful and comfortable contrivance of the day, and but few will mosquito be used by every family either in the country or in the city.

The above description of the insect tent may appear extravagant and calculated to give a false estimate as to coloring, but it is not so, and on trial when the case with notices and advertisements of new things, that they will be duly aware of that no such article has been made in this article, or which people will be convinced by calling at store at Charles street.
