THE PROSPECT.

The Democracy deserve credit for one thing, and where we say "the Democracy" we allude to both wings of the belligerent party. They express boundless confidence in the future. Their trust is illimitable, and their vaunts are endless. For both of them there is no such word as fail. They are both certain of victory. According to one side, BRECKINRIDGE and LANE are to triumph over all competitors. According to the other, DOUGLAS and JOHNSON are to distance their rivals. On the one hand we are assured that the fifteen States of the South are all going en masse for the nominees of the Seceders. On the other it is boldly asserted that the candidates of the Regulars will receive all the Southern votes except those of a few factious partisans. One authority affirms that all the South and part of the North are certain for the Kentucky aspirant, the other entertains no doubt whatever that the Little Giant of Illinois will carry a goodly portion of the South and sundry of the largest Northern States. It is clear either that this extravagance of language consists of mere rhetorical flourishes which will impose upon none but simpletons, or that it is the result of a factitious, overweening enthusiasm which refuses to see any thing save what it wishes to see. At this incipient stage of the canvass it is wholly impossible even for the coolest and most unbiassed minds to arrive at a satisfactory conclusion, since the elements to form a plausible calculation are still in embryo. We may speculate with more or less plausibility, and indulge in surmises of a somewhat specious character, but all such conjectures are liable to be set aside and disproved by future events. With the lights before us, few and dim as they are, we can endeavor to peer as in a glass darkly, but that is all. With the necessary caution, let us glance at the prospect.

In the first place it is beyond a doubt that the Black Republicans must derive immense encouragement from the discords of the Democracy. We must never lose sight of the possibility of the election of ABRAHAM LINCOLN by the people. This possibility is greatly enhanced by the dimensions of his opponents. Thus, after all, is the one great and deplorable consummation which may signalize the close of the canvass. Supposing, however, that LINCOLN should be defeated before the people, is there a remote possibility of the election of either of his adversaries? We think not.

Let us look first at the South. The Douglas and the Breckinridge men claim the South with an air of supreme confidence—the latter, however, most boldly and defiantly. The course which the South will take seems to us highly problematical. Both wings of the Democracy found their estimates all consideration of the Union candidates, BELL and EVERETT, forgetting that their friends have gathered fresh courage, especially in the South, from the Union ovation at Boston, and are evidently resolved to make a vigorous fight in all quarters. Take for instance such States as Delaware, Virginia, Tennessee, North Carolina, Missouri, Kentucky and Louisiana. In some of these DOUGLAS is stronger than BRECKINRIDGE; in others weaker—but in all both candidates possess numerous, ardent and influential adherents who will see that electoral tickets are formed, and will urge the claims of their respective champions with all the ability at their command. In these States the result is not in the least destitute of strength, especially in Virginia, North Carolina, Tennessee and Kentucky. Now is it not probable that if the Union men conduct the canvass with proper spirit and energy, while DOUGLAS and BRECKINRIDGE are dividing the Democratic forces BELL and EVERETT may slip in by pluralities? Is not this at least probable? There is not one of these States in which a loss of ten thousand Democratic votes by dissension to one of the two candidates would not secure the electoral vote to the Opposition. We know it is thought that the Bell and Everett men will go over to the Democracy, and such wing flatters itself with the hope of acquiring them, but in all honesty we must say we see no signs of such defection. There is apparently more apathy in Louisiana than in any other State, and yet even here the supporters of the Union candidates express an invincible determination to adhere to them unflinchingly. If they did desert BELL it would not be to sustain BRECKINRIDGE.

Let us now examine popular sentiment in other States of the South. Maryland has been an uniformly Opposition, that with a divided Democracy is in next to certain that a plurality vote will be given to the Union ticket. With respect to Georgia, Alabama and Florida, they may be considered doubtful States. In the two former DOUGLAS has numerous friends, but we conceive the Breckinridge party to be decidedly stronger, and we think it not improbable they will carry all three. The contest will be chiefly between them and the Union men. With respect to Mississippi, Arkansas and South Carolina, there can be very little hesitation indeed. They will almost certainly vote for the nominees of the Seceding Convention. So, too, would Texas, but for the fact that HOUSTON is unquestionably present there and will secure the votes of large numbers of the Opposition and of the disaffected Democrats. Texas is doubtful as between BRECKINRIDGE and HOUSTON.

With regard to the North, it is exceedingly difficult to establish data for a correct estimate. One point seems certain viz: that in scarcely any of the Northern States will the Breckinridge ticket be enabled to display the slightest strength. We question whether they will attempt to run electors in the Northwest or in New England. The contest in the doubtful holding States will be between DOUGLAS and LINCOLN, with a respectable vote for BELL from the conservative element of the Opposition. Whatever influence the Administration may wield in the North will be indubitably arrayed against DOUGLAS. Nevertheless the popularity of the man is such that we think he stands a fair chance of carrying Pennsylvania, Illinois, Indiana, and may prevail in Connecticut, Ohio, Iowa and Wisconsin. California and Oregon are too distant to justify speculation. Their delegates sided with the Seceders, but that proves nothing, they may both be carried by DOUGLAS or LINCOLN.

From these calculations, confessedly imperfect, because the early state of the canvass precludes the possibility of exactness, but yet approximate to the truth, the unprejudiced reader may perceive how extravagant assumptions are the lessons on either side. In fact all that prudent and cool observers can say is, that LINCOLN'S chances have vastly improved in consequence of the hopeless quarrel between the Democrats. We fear there are thousands of nominal Democrats in the North who will now desert to themselves—to the Republicans, and swell the ranks of Black Republicanism. If, however, LINCOLN should be beaten for which we most devoutly pray, the election will be thrown into the House of Representatives if it ever gets there. Providence alone can tell how the struggle will terminate.

A BOAR.—Our cotemporary of the Crescent takes strong ground in favor of Bell and Everett.

FOR NEW YORK.—By reference to our advertising columns it will be seen that the magnificent steamship R R CRYLER will leave Spence's wharf for New York on Thursday next, 5th July, connecting with the train leaving New Orleans on Saturday, at 12 M. The price of passage, including meals and berth, is only $20 75.

THE CAPTURED AFRICANS.—The clipper-ship Star of the Union, of 1100 tons, says the New York Daily World, sailed from that port last week for Key West, to take on board four hundred of the captured Africans now at Key West. This is the third ship the New York State Colonization Society has dispatched during the month. These vessels have been fitted out in accordance with the emigrant laws of the United States. They are provided with experienced surgeons and attentive nurses; a large supply of clothing is furnished by the Society, and every provision made for their health and comfort. several carpenters will go out in this vessel to build houses for the Africans who are being taken to the coast of Africa. The cost to the Colonization Society for the charter of these vessels, the provisions, clothing, and maintenance of the 1400 negroes transported in the ships for one year, will be over $100,000.

WHY JOHN ADAMS WAS NOT A SHOEMAKER.—The reason John Adams, it is said, was designed for a shoemaker, like his father. One day Deacon Adams, his parent, gave his sons apples to cut out by a pattern that had a three-cornered hole in it, by which it had hung upon a nail, and it was found that he had followed the pattern exactly, triangular hole and all. The Deacon, upon seeing this, decided that John wasn't to be a shoemaker, and put him to learning. The old patriot would have made a good printer in an office where the rule was to "follow copy."

European Political Intelligence—The Situations Affairs—The spirit of nationality in Sicily has now entered on such a career that it seems in fair way of being irresistible. The intelligence from the continent is centered in the great events of which Sicily is the scene.

The Bourbon Batteries of Messina are present in full correspondence with Garibaldi, who is still at Palermo, his present headquarters.

The recent news which has been laid before the public resembling an insurrection in Calabria is at present denied, and said to be unfounded.

Dispatches from Palermo say that Catania, after having been pillaged, was evacuated by the Royal troops, without loss during an engagement with the insurgents, who, however, were driven off.

Several Neapolitan officers and soldiers have deserted and returned to Palermo, whence they were sent to Turin.

Little Royer, Chief of the Arapahoe tribe of Indians, was killed in a row previously reported. His brother received a somewhat dangerous wound during the last engagement.

The reports from California are cheering, and reports are rushing in from Pike's Peak. Some of the claims are yielding fabulous amounts.

Gulch miners are realizing from fifteen to twenty ounces per day.

Further Particulars of the Loss of the Steamer Mon Louis.

The St. Louis Republican has the following respecting this sad calamity:

CAIRO, June 25, 1860.—The boat was torn to pieces by the explosion all forward of the wheelhouses. After burning to the water's edge she sank. From the best information we can obtain at this hour, but few were lost, not over six or eight, though some say that persons were on the burning boat, before she sank. Mr. Williams, of St. Louis, saved his wife and two daughters, and probably all his family. The Mayor of Alton and the citizens generally took all possible care of the wounded, had them brought to the St. Charles Hotel, and provided clothing and all other comforts for them.

The following are here wounded:

T. Flanigan, Dubuque, leg badly hurt; ——— Marshall, clerk, badly scalded; Henry Mason, deck hand, badly injured; Mr. Newton, Arkansas, head hurt; Mrs. Simpson, Memphis, slightly injured, and her boy supposed to be lost; Miss Morrison, Cape Girardeau, head hurt; ——— Tyler, negro, very badly scalded; D. Atherton, scalded.

P. McKye, slightly injured; also a few others whose names we have not yet learned

Capt. Nunson has not been found as yet and is supposed to be lost, but there are several of the crew on the Missouri side of the river, and there is yet hope.

To the names of the injured must be added those of Mrs. Wermuck, of Memphis, badly scalded, and Catharine McFarland, of Baton Rouge, badly wounded in the head.

A gentleman named Williams, of St. Louis, who got off the Lewis here, leaving his family on board, bought the captain of the Bay City, with tears in his eyes, to start out his boat, but he was afraid to, and refused. Such a man simply deserves the execration of every body. The Sunny Side came down from St. Louis shortly after the boat commenced burning, and rendered very valuable assistance.

Some of the passengers of the Lewis who were picked up out of the river took passage on the Bay City, for St. Louis, and were put out on the Missouri side by her captain because they had no money. A crowd of people started off this morning to hang the captain of the Bay City, but were persuaded not to do so. The indignation felt on account of this treatment of the unfortunate victims is very great.

Capt. Nunson is probably lost. There are no survivors on the Missouri side. The second clerk, the mate, the engineers, the pilots, and nearly all the deck hands are missing. The wounded are mostly doing well, and are well cared for at the St. Charles Hotel.

Last Hours of the Democratic Convention

—We find the following in our Baltimore exchanges:

Mr. Wickliffe, of Louisiana, offered the following, which he said would give Douglas 40,000 in his State:

"Resolved, That it is in accordance with the Cincinnati platform, that during the existence of Territorial Governments the subject of the domestic relations, as the same has been or shall hereafter be finally determined by the Supreme Court of the United States, shall be respected by all good citizens, and enforced with prompt fidelity by every branch of the General Government.

Mr. Bayard, of Ohio, called for the previous question, when the resolutions was adopted.

The Convention then, after the passage of several unimportant resolutions, adjourned sine die.

TRIBUTE TO AN AMERICAN STATESMAN BUILDER.—We have been shown, says the National Intelligencer, an oval box, studded with diamonds, emeralds and opals, presented by the Emperor of Russia to Mr. Wm. H. Webb, of New York, as a testimonial of the Emperor's satisfaction with the manner in which Mr. Webb executed the contract for building the frigate Ilmaid Admiral for the Russian Government. The following is a letter of the Russian Minister of Marine conveying to Mr. Webb the handsome testimonial:

Sir—His Imperial Highness, the Grand Admiral desires me to acknowledge the reception of your letter and the 7th of January. He has great pleasure in informing you that he is perfectly satisfied with the performances of the frigate, especially with her qualities for handling, and appears to consider her a model of a perfect war steamer.

His Highness is also very much pleased with the manner you conducted the whole of the business, and with the zeal you, with others, in it was not in consequence of want of necessary qualities in the ship, or any deficiency in the workmanship, that the vessel did not come up to the numerous details with the utmost care and good faith.

I may add that, as a proof of the entire satisfaction of the Imperial Government, his Majesty has been pleased to acknowledge your services in ordering a handsome diamond box to be forwarded to you, which you will receive through the United States, which was done immediately after you left St Petersburg.

I remain, sir, yours truly devoted.

N. METLIN, Minister of Marine

To Mr. Webb.

HELPER IN THE SENATE.—A pretty good "hell" was perpetrated in the House the other day by some of its members, who professed to be just from the Senate, and asked "if there was every one they met if they had "heard of the excitement in the Senate?" "Why no," would the reply be, "what is it?" "The greatest excitement of the season, for about the Hash in affair," continued the reporters. "Well, I declare," exclaimed the other, "I never heard of it." "Why," responded the relator, "just as the chaplain of the Senate was opening with prayer, and got as far as 'Oh, God, thou art our refuge and strength,' the Hash fell down from the ceiling, and the Hash struck every Democratic Senator threw his bowie knife, and exclaimed in a loud voice, 'Where is he?'
