

Energy/Healing/Medical Intuitive

History

The practice of using intuition or clairvoyance for medical information dates back to Phineas Parkhurst Quimby (1802-1866) whose intuitive healing practice began in 1854.

Edgar Cayce (1877-1945) was known as a Medical Clairvoyant and is probably to this day the most documented of all medical clairvoyants, although modern historical analysis has debunked the vast majority of his claims.

Dr. Norm Shealy along with Caroline Myss first coined the term "Medical Intuitive" in 1987 as part of Shealy's research on intuition and medical application. Some Medical Intuitives report that they can 'see' inside objects as well as the body.

Other Medical Intuitives assert that they can view energetic problems in a person's aura before any physical signs of illness can be detected. Some Medical Intuitives claim to 'see' areas of illness as dark, grainy, or sticky energy while others claim to 'see' the organ itself.

Faith healers often claim to have divinely appropriated medical intuitive abilities. William M. Branham, the father of the Pentecostal Latter Rain Movement was said by his followers to be able to discern the health condition of people that attended his services, and in many cases heal them of their affliction.

Evidence for these healings is all anecdotal and testimonial and have not been medically verified. After his death, Branham's sons wrote a book cataloging many of his errors.

This definition is part of a series that covers the topic of Intuition. The Official Guide to Intuition is Dr. Judith Orloff. Dr. Orloff is a board-certified psychiatrist and assistant professor of psychiatry at UCLA. Her latest book Positive Energy (Harmony Books) completes a trilogy of books around awakening intuition and subtle energy.

Dr. Orloff has spoken at medical schools, hospitals, the American Psychiatric Association, Fortune Magazine's Most Powerful Women Summit, and alternative and traditional health forums—venues where she presents practical intuitive tools to doctors, patients, and everyday people.

How I managed to save a life

"At one of the international martial arts championships that I was invited as a special guest in Asia. During one of the bouts, one of the competitors kicked another competitor so hard that he was instantly knocked out.

The injured competitor started having seizures and foaming at the mouth. The medics and officials were unable to revive him, it was very serious.

I decided to intervene as I new seconds counted; I immediately identified where the area in the brain was affected and where the trauma was, the area of the brain was swelling from the deadly impact.

I scanned the area and started to work by placing my hand in specific sequencings and activations without touching him.

Within seconds this individual eyes started to focus. the seizures stopped, the body that was shaking violently instantly stopped.

The foaming stopped, the individual was revived and started to breath again (as his breathing stopped from the impact of the deadly kick).

In my opinion with the severity of the impact and damaged caused by the kick received to the head, this individual would have either died or received brain damage.

Everyone was amazed at how fast the recovery happened as I started to work on this chap. The medics and all around could not revive him and I did not want to waste time as this guy was on his way out. So I instantly sprang into action and did what I needed to do.

Utilising my gifts I was able to see where the problem areas were, unblocking the damage and allowing the energy to flow correctly. Should it have been left, in my opinion this guy would have paid the highest price.

After transferring energy to the damaged areas and working on him without touching him, I was able to extract the energy created from the impact and allow the good/chi/prana/tachyon energy to flow.

By doing that it alleviated the swelling to the brain. If one can call it the circuitry was reactivated which allowed a very fast track recovery.

The crowd was amazed at my speed of how I worked and the speed of this chap's recovery. When I was done I returned to my seat, as the competition had to continue.

I was pleased that I was able to get there in time and do what I could, a few seconds late would have been to late". Dr John Souglides Ph.D.

He is also able to further identify specific timelines within various energetic body/s where the initial dis-ease has been triggered from, where it comes from and from/in which particular dimension/s it stems and resides within the vastness of the entirety of the individual.

In today's age people have become aware of higher consciousness and delve deeper in the spiritual realms in order to search for truth and understanding of the deeper aspects within the universe. A better understanding of the multitude and vastness of spiritual realms is evident within societies now days.
